WEATHER INDICATIONS.

U. S. Department of Agriculture,
Weather Bureau,
Toledo, Oct. 31, 1892.

There is a storm of slight energy central this morning over Kansas, which is moving northeastward and will reach the lake region by to-night. This storm has caused rains over the greater portion of the country between the Rocky mountains and the Mississippi river, and from Texas northward to Lake Superior. A second low area of pressure is advancing from the extreme northwest, and will probably join the storm now in Kansas.

The barometer is highest over the eastern states, and will dominate the weather over that section during the next 36 hours.

The temperature has risen in all sections of the country during the past 24 hours, and will rise slightly to-day, except over the extreme northern portion, where it will fall slightly.

Local forecast for Toledo and vicinity for next 36 hours: Fair, followed by rain this afternoon or to-night; slightly warmer.

FOLDING BEDS

You Can Do Almost Anything

With our Gosben folding bed. There used to be an idea that two into one wouldn't go; this bed upsets the notion completely. It doesn't, like the chameleon, change its color, but it does change its character, and it is as handsome as a bed at night as it is as a book-case in the day-time. It is one of the happiest combinations of modern ingenuity, and in an instant it turns your sleeping apartment into a handsomely appointed library. Perhaps you have an idea that this double advantage carries with it a double cost. It does not. Call and see it and learn the price.

Late Reports From Around the Lakes

Where Many Vessels Went on the Rocks.

The Big Maruba in Very Bad Shape.

Schooner Zach Chandler a Total Wreck on Lake Superior—The Veronica Has a Hard Time of It.

Cleveland, Oct. 31.—(Special)—Several thousand people gathered, yesterday, on the government piers, in Lake View park, and at other places from which a view of the lake could be obtained. They had read of the damage to vessel interests wrought by the storm of Friday night and Saturday morning and were curious to see the wrecks and witness the work of releasing the vessels that had been driven aground.

At 6 o'clock last evening all the vessels that grounded Friday night and Saturday and several others that became fast yesterday had been released with the exception of the iron ore boat Maruba. Some progress was made with that barge, but last night she was still hard aground. The vessel lies nearly in the same position as on Saturday. She is just east of the government pier, with her head toward the breakwater. Tugs worked with her all of yesterday, and about noon a lighter ran alongside and began unloading her cargo of ore.

This work was still going on at dusk. During the day the seven tugs of the Vessel Owners' tug line labored to release the vessel. It was thought Saturday that she was fast on the rocks, but this is denied by vessel men. They believe that besides being fast in the sand she is resting on an old wreck. Her stern has been swung around in both directions but the prow of the vessel sticks fast. At one time yesterday afternoon three tugs combined their efforts in a straightaway pull to release the big steamer but she did not move.

The iron ore steambarge Pontiac, which went aground at 1 o'clock Saturday morning during the storm, was released at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. She was fast on the bottom behind the west arm of the breakwater. The tug Alva B. succeeded in getting her off. She had been slightly damaged, but was easily repaired, and cleared for Marquette in the afternoon.

Nothing was done Sunday towards saving the schooners Colonel Cook, Glad Tidings, and Samana. The Colonel Cook is ashore just west of the life saving station and the Samana is on the rocks at the foot of Dodge street. The Glad Tidings is waterlogged alongside the west pier. Her hull is partially under water.

The Zach Chandler.

Cleveland, Oct. 31.—The following special dispatch was received last evening from Newberry, Mich., which is connected by telephone with Deer Park, on Lake Superior, where the steamer Western Reserve was lost:

"At 10 o'clock Friday morning the schooner Zach Chandler, in charge of Capt. T. H. Skinner, loaded with lumber from Ashland for Cleveland, struck the outer bar three miles off Deer Park. Ten minutes later nothing could be seen of her. The schooner had a crew of eight persons on board, five of whom took to the yawl boat. The other three, the captain, mate, and one sailor, made a raft and started for shore.

A heavy sea washed the sailor, Frank Richter, from the raft and he was drowned. The balance of the crew are safe ashore.

The lumber is strewn along the shore and the boat is a total loss. The wind was north, blowing a heavy gale. The life-saving crew are now looking for the body of the drowned sailor."

The schooner Zach Chandler, which was built in Detroit in 1867, is the property of Capt. C. E. Benham. While she is an old boat, she was thoroughly rebuilt in 1873, and has received extensive repairs since. She has experienced her share of hardships, and in a storm on Lake Superior two or three years ago she brought up on a farm only a few miles from the place where she has finally gone to pieces. At that time she was thrown high and dry on the shore, and received enough damage to make her a constructive total loss; she was afterwards released by an enterprising wrecking firm, and again came into Capt. Benham's hands. Her value, rated in the Inland Lloyds vessel register, as $10,500, is probably well covered by insurance.

Hard Lines for the Veronica.

Erie, Pa., Oct. 31.—The gale which swept over Lake Erie did thousands of dollars damage here to the shipping and fishing industries. The nets of the large fishing firms were torn and generally destroyed. The large steambarge Veronica, bound for Erie from Escanaba with ore, got out of Detroit river Friday morning and was caught in the gale. The seas rolled over her, and crushing in the boiler house, put out the fire. Fireman John O'Brien was thrown over to the port side of the engine room, the fall breaking his leg and injuring him so badly that his condition is critical. The vessel was in danger of foundering, but after the crew made sail she beat about on Lake Erie all night, when tugs got hold of her and brought her into port. The crew suffered terribly from cold and exposure, and there is hardly a man who is able for duty.

Picked Up a Crew.

Buffalo, Oct. 31.—The steamer Hudson brought in the crew of the barge Sunshine, of the Pringle tow, which broke up off Point Pelee.

May Be a Total Loss.

Detroit, Oct. 31.—The schooner H. P. Baldwin, ashore at Cedar creek, below Colchester, has received a terrible pounding and may be a total loss. The tug Stowe, with steam pumps, will go to her in the morning. She has coal for Lake Superior and is full of water. She is owned by Put Smith, of Cleveland, and is insured.

Valuable Dredge Lost.

Amherstburg, Ont., Oct. 31.—The tugs Home Rule and Munro, which arrived here, report that they passed Port Colborne with the dredge Dominion and six scows, just before the storm. The dredge sank off Point au Pelee. She was owned by Comlin Bros., of Thorold, Ont., was valued at $16,000, and insured for $10,000. The scows are adrift on Lake Erie.

Came Near Foundering.

Sand Beach, Oct. 31.—The steamer Henry Houghton came near foundering of Port Austin. Half her deck load load slid off, and she finally righted up.

The body of Wheelsman Scott was found this morning and taken to Marysville for burial.

The Ewen's Experience.

Detroit, Oct. 31.—The steam barge Havana, which passed down, met the full force of the gale on Lake Huron. Both topmasts were broken off above the crosstrees by the force of the wind and blown overboard, clear of the boat.

The schooner F. D. Ewen, consort of the G. W. Morley, parted her tow line off Sand Beach, and before she could be gotten off on her course she was boarded by an immense sea, which swept her decks fore and aft. The port door and window of the cabin were smashed in, and the yawl boat carried off the davits. The captain narrowly escaped being washed overboard, saving himself by clinging to the mizzen stay.

The barge Hattie, of the Miami's tow, received a shaking up on Lake Huron that by the time she reached Lake St. Clair she became waterlogged. The tug Onaping, with a steam pump, has gone to her assistance. The schooner Parker was released from near St. Clair cut to-day uninjured.

The John Schuetter.

Elk Rapids, Oct. 31.—The schooner John Schuetter, of Two Rivers, broke away from the dock and went on the beach in the gale from last Saturday. She is lying in about three feet of water on a sandy bottom. She is sprung some on the side and is full of water.

Capt. Hubbard, of Toledo, is on his way to her. The stranded boat is insured.

There is another schooner ashore three miles north of here, but her name cannot be learned. The gale played havoc with the telegraph service.

Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Grain frieghts hold steady and unchanged with a good demand for boats to carry corn to Buffalo.

Duluth.

Duluth, Oct. 31.—Two whalebacks were chartered for wheat to Buffalo at 4 cents. Most boats are taking ore rather than risk delay in unloading at Buffalo. Wheat shipments last week were 1,187,186 bushels; in store, 5,449,100 bushels.

Buffalo.

Buffalo, Oct. 31.—Coal shipments for October exceeded all previous records for any one month. They were 546,000 tons. Charters—Palmer, Superior, Aberdeen, Duluth, 25 cents; Michigan, Chicago, 75 cents.

Mackinaw.

Mackinaw City, Oct. 31.—The steamer Pawnee and one consort have been heard from at Northport. No news of the Young has been obtained.

Barges Broke Away.

Mackinaw City, Oct. 31.—The barges Edwards and Young, consorts of the steamer Pawnee, broke away from the Pawnee off the Beavers at 1 o'clock Saturday morning. The Edwards returned here unable to learn the whereabouts of the Pawnee. Immediately after the Young's line parted, the Edwards, which was next in the tow, cast off its line from the Young, and soon afterwards the boats lost sight of each other. The Edwards lost considerable canvas.

REPUBLICAN TOUGHS

Try to Prevent a Democrat From Speaking.

Shameful State of Affairs in North Carolina.

Auditor Sanderlin Has a Narrow Escape From the Mob With His Life.

New York, Oct. 31.—A Herald special from Raleigh, N. C., says: Rev. Dr. George W. Sanderlin, state auditor, returned to-day from a canvassing tour west of the Blue Ridge mountains, in this state, which proved to be the most exciting of his life. His trip was through Mitchell and Yancy, which are on the Tennessee border and which contain the worst element of law breakers in the entire state.

He had an appointment to speak at Burnsville, county seat of Yancy. A gang of republican desperadoes in that county had sworn that no democratic speakers should be heard, and when they found that Dr. Sanderlin was to speak they determined to assassinate him.

Burnsville is a small typical mountain town, and on the day of speaking a very large crowd had gathered, coming from all parts of the country on horseback. It is said that a number of east Tennessee desperadoes were also present, as well as some from Mitchell county.

The speaking was conducted in the court house and the room was filled. There was a large crowd outside, composed of republicans, who renewed the old threats and seemed determined to have a row.

The leader was Bud Parrott, a noted desperado, who was for a time an outlaw. To him was assigned the duty of killing Dr. Sanderlin. The latter was a soldier in the late war on the confederate side.

After the war he became a prominent Baptist minister, and has been for years pastor of one of the leading churches of that denomination of Baltimore.

He was informed of the threats of the mob and its desperate attitude, but the democrats who filled the court house assured him that he should be heard, and receive full support and protection.

He is a fine speaker, and soon after he began his speech there was a commotion at the door of the court room. This was caused by the entrance of Bud Parrott, who was armed with a bowie knife. He at once began to curse Sanderlin and swore that he would kill him. While speaking he attempted to elbow his way toward Sanderlin along the aisle through the crowd.

A number of democrats seized Parrott and rushed him toward the outer door of the court house. As soon as the door was opened Parrott's gang rushed in to his aid, and many pistols were fired. Knives were drawn, stones were thrown and a desperate fight raged on the steps of the court house and in front of the building.

A number on both sides were shot or cut with knives. The democrats, however, got the best of this encounter and drove the republicans away from the building. Dr. Sanderlin then resumed his speech.

Suddenly the republicans reassembled in force and two of their number forced their way into the court room, but were instantly seized and thrown out. Then the fight was renewed more desperately than before. Parrott was shot twice through the body and killed, while a democrat named Phillips was so badly cut with a bowie knife that he died shortly afterward.

Three other men whose names Dr. Sanderlin did not ascertain were also killed. More than a dozen men were seriously injured with bullets and knives.

Dr. Sanderlin says that on leaving the court house the scene reminded him of his war experience. The dead and wounded were lying everywhere. There was great excitement in the town. Some of the desperadoes had left the place and it was at once suspected that they would lie in wait along the road and endeavor to ambush and shoot Auditor Sanderlin.

A large escort of determined men was made up to take Dr. Sanderlin safely to the railway station, which was some distance away. It was discovered later that a number of the auditor's enemies were in ambush waiting to kill him, but their object was thwarted by the body of democrats. The attack was entirely unprovoked, as Dr. Sanderlin was a courteous speaker, and the attempt at assassination has aroused unprecedented indignation in all sections of the state.

NEBRASKA'S EIGHT VOTES

A Common Warefare Against Republicans.

Farmers at Last Know Their Enemy.

The Plan of Campaign Is to Take the State Out of the Harrison Column.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 31.—Nebraska has eight electoral votes. A little more than 200,000 votes will be cast for the national ticket on November 8. Four years ago the Harrison electors carried the state by a plurality of nearly 30,000. Cleveland received a popular vote of over 80,000.

Two years ago the republican state ticket was elected, save Boyd (dem.) for governor, who pulled through because he was anti-prohibitionist. Prohibition was the leading issue in that campaign. One year ago a republican supreme court justice was elected.

This year Nebraska is a doubtful state on the national ticket. Party leaders concede the election of Crounse, republican nominee for governor and think that he will pull the balance of the state ticket through with him. But they are not confident of the election of the Harrison-Reid electors.

The democrats and independents (people's party) are waging common warfare upon the republican party. "A vote for Weaver is a vote for Cleveland," is the war cry that has been passed all along the democratic line. The democratic state and electoral tickets will be forsaken. Governor Boyd has fostered this plan of campaign and has staked his political future on the outcome. Should it succeed and Cleveland be elected by the house of representatives or otherwise, Governor Boyd, it is whispered, is to get a place in the new cabinet. Other democratic leaders are inspired in this line of action by the fair promise it gives of defeating the republican electors—a result that can be reached in no other way in Nebraska.

Careful estimates give the republicans a net strength of 85,000; independents, 75,000; democrats, 40,000 to 45,000 votes in national issues. The paramount question at this time is, How many of the independents can be won over to the support of the policy of the republican party? Or how many democrats can be induced to throw principle to the dogs and vote for Weaver because "it is good politics" to do so?

The republicans are scared. Extraordinary efforts are being made to redeem the state. Senators Manderson and Paddock are on the stump. The republican league is straining every nerve to win back the independents who were formerly republican. But under existing conditions it is considered to be an easier task for the independents and democrats to fuse on the independent ticket and secure its election than for the republicans to win back 25,000 or 35,000 votes that have strayed away. There are, however, 15,000 veterans in Nebraska, who, with their sons, will vote largely for Harrison and Reid.

The leaders of the democratic and independent parties have held two conferences the past week and it is said a perfect understanding was reached. J. Sterling Morton, democratic candidate for governor, is to be sacrificed along with the entire state and electoral ticket, and the order has been passed all along the line that democrats must quietly vote for the people's electoral ticket. Leading democratic papers are printing instructions to the people "how to vote," and as an "example" name the independent electors. Just to what an extent the democrats will accede to the wishes of the party managers no one is able to say, but leading democrats are confident that the republican electoral ticket will be elected.

In the congressional canvass the democrats have a fair show of electing four out of six candidates. Bryan, in the First (Lincoln) district, will probably be returned. The republican candidate, Judge Field, is making a hard fight, and the race will be close, but competent judges are inclined to believe that Bryan will win.

Judge Doane, democratic nominee in the Second (Omaha) district, is a very strong man. His election is not sure, but probable.

McKeighan, representative from the Fifth district, has a good show of re-election.

Keiper, in the Third, it is held, will make another democratic vote in congress.

It is conceded that Haines, republican nominee for congress in the Fourth district, will be elected. Kem, populist candidate in the Sixth, will in all probability be returned.

Generally speaking the campaign is a quiet one. The work has been confined chiefly to stump oratory. The farmers are not turning out to political meetings as they did two years ago. The apparent indifference shown is frequently discussed, but not satisfactorily accounted for.

The Montgomery Reporter Declares for Tariff Reform From Now On.

Newburg, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The Montgomery Reporter, hitherto a republican organ, has come out for Cleveland. In announcing the flop, the editor says that he has seen enough of the shams of protection to satisfy him, and that henceforth he will favor the cause of tariff reform.

SENT TOOLS IN A BIBLE.

Two Burglars in Danbury Jail Plan an Ingenious Escape, But the Jailer Is Too Smart for Them.

Danbury, Conn., Oct. 31.—Daniel Mackey and John Green were arrested here about two weeks ago for robbing St. Peter's church. After they had been in jail a few days, Mackey obtained writing materials from Jailer Alexander and was told that the rules of the jail compelled the jailer to read all letters written by prisoners.

Mackey wrote a letter and gave it to James Casey, a fellow prisoner, whose costs he paid, and Casey was discharged. When Casey was leaving the jail the jailer searched him, but did not find the letter. Outside the jail Casey became alarmed and took the letter to the village priest, who turned it over to the police.

The letter was addressed to Mackey's sister, and was a request that she send at once a set of tools to be used in escaping from jail. He specified that the tools should be "those used by the blacksmith in breaking out," and further stated that the "case was urgent, as the Massachusetts job was all fixed and was good for $2,000 sure."

Mackey and Green were transferred to the Bridgeport jail. They had not been gone an hour when an express package came for Mackey. Jailer Alexander opened the package and found it contained two magazines and a Bible. In the Bible was the following letter:

Newark, N. J.

Dear Brother Daniel—It is a great shock to me to hear of the trouble you have fallen into. Why did you not do as mother told you and be like your brother the blacksmith, instead of roving around the country this way? I know you must be innocent of such a terrible charge as is now brought against you, but see what bad company will do. My heart is full and I can hardly write to you. Mother is worrying awful about you. I will try and see you this week.

Do not be discouraged, as, of course, they never can prove you guilty of this terrible thing. I hope you will think over your awful position now and when you are released come right home and stay. I send you the Bible mother sends you the magazines. We both send love and will pray for you night and day. From your loving sister, MARY CORSON.

P. S.—You need not answer, as we both expect to come up there. M. C.

There was nothing suspicious in the appearance of the Bible, but the jailer was hidden away in the book. He and his wife examined the Bible carefully and were about to give up their search when Mrs. Alexander's thumb struck a slight irregularity on the inside back cover. She took a pair of scissors and stuck them under a tiny ridge and pried up the point of a small, flat file. A corner of the cover was quickly torn off and there were revealed two files and two saws that had been bound inside the cover.

BIG FIRE.

Two Hundred Thousand Dollars Go Up in Smoke.

New Orleans, Oct. 31.—The Grunewald opera house, valued at $200,000, was destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. The building was insured for $60,000. Only through the thorough work of the fire department was a terrible conflagration averted, for only a short distance away are situated the magnificent Chess, Checkers and Whist club, the Jesuit church and college, the Tulane university buildings and other fine structures. The university caught fire several times, but the buildings were saved.

The families of George Metz and Louis Hessy, who occupied rooms on the fourth floor of the opera house building, had narrow escapes from death. As soon as they heard the alarm they rushed out on the balcony of the fourth floor in their night dresses. The firemen stretched a rope cradle or bridge from the roof of the burning building across a narrow alley to the Chess Club building, from which they lowered a rope to the imperiled women and children. The rope was fastened to the waist of each in this manner and they were drawn over, one at a time, to the roof and balconies of the club house. When the rescued people had reached places of safety it was discovered that Mrs. Metz and baby boy had been severely burned about the lower limbs.

FOREST FIRES.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 31.—A special to the News from Brownstown, Ind., says: "Forest fires have broken on the "Knobs," south of town. The flames are spreading fast, carrying with them untold destruction of valuable timber. Many thousands dollars' loss will result. The forest is about four miles from the town and on high hills. At night the flames light up the surrounding country for miles.

WILL RESUME WORK.

Paris, Oct. 31.—The miners on strike at Carmaux have concluded after consultation to accept the terms of arbiration and resume work at once. This decision was hastened by the fact that the non-union miners were determined to go to work anyway, and that a large number of non-unionists from Belgium and elsewhere were prepared to take the places of the strikers.

THE GILL CASE

The Subject of a Lively and Interesting Tilt

In Common Pleas Court This Morning.

J. D. Ford Withdraws From the Case—Judge Harmon Says Something About the Daly Case

Judge Harmon this morning, made a statement with reference to the jury in the Daly case, that toasted somebody good and warm.

It came through a bout between attorneys in Judge Lemmon's court over the assignment of a case.

The court called the case of Neaster against Gilday. T. J. McDonnell, attorney for the defense, insisted that the case be taken up at once. F. E. Wright, attorney for the plaintiff, stated that he was anxious to go into the trial of the case at once, but that Prosecutor Barber insisted upon trying the Gill case in criminal court at once. He thought Judge Harmon would let the Gill case go over until Wednesday, and requested that the case be set for 2 o'clock to-day. This Judge Lemmon refused to do.

Mr. Wright requested permission to call in Judge Harmon and did so. He stated the circumstances to Judge Harmon.

Mr. Barber stated that he was anxious to proceed with these cases with all speed possible. Also, that the jury had been summoned and the expense would begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

J. D. Ford, associated with Mr. Wright, stated that he had very important business in Monroe to-morrow, and unless the Gill case was postponed until Wednesday he would be compelled to withdraw from the case.

Judge Harmon then stated that when the case was continued before indictment it was upon the agreement that they should be disposed of with dispatch. A month had now elapsed and only one case had been disposed of. It was evident that the defense from the very start had endeavored to delay proceedings. In conclusion he said: "This jury has been summoned and the court does not wish to subject them to any outside influence by granting any further delay in this case. As a matter of fact, the jury in the first case was not entirely excepted from interference, as certain of the jurymen stated after they were sworn had been approached. The court does not intend to give an opportunity to anyone to approach the present jury. We do not wish to infer that the defendant had anything to do with the matter, but over-zealous friends took part in the proceedings. These over-zealous friends might have had something to do with that case in another way had an application been filed. But as an application was not filed, so be it."

The case was fixed for hearing at 2 o'clock this afternoon. J. D. Ford announced to the court that he would withdraw from the case.

Judge Ritchie will take Mr. Ford's place as associate counsel.

THE PASTORS' UNION.

The Regular Meeting of the Pastors' Union Was Held This Morning.

The regular meeting of the Pastors' union was held this morning. Rev. Ormond conducted devotional exercises, after which a communication was read from Dr. Bacon, stating that he would be unable to be present and read the paper of the day, as was anticipated. On motion it was decided to have Dr. Bacon's paper read at his convenience. Rev. Buckingham moved that the union appoint a committee to act promptly on questions of public morals and the enforcement of laws. The matter was referred to a committee of nine of the T. U. T. A.

Mr. Greer was present and asked that a committee from this organization be appointed to confer with the managers of Wonderland relative to the matter of placing a crosswalk from Hockenberger's saloon to Wonderland. Revs. Hiller, Anderson and Buckingham were appointed to act, as members of the vigilance committee.

Rev. Buckingham will give the paper at the next meeting on "Spurgeon as I Knew Him."

ABOUT CITY HALL.

Distruction of Illegal Natural Gas Bonds.

The mayor, city clerk and city auditor were engaged this morning in destroying the first issue of natural gas bonds, which were found defective in their wording, and had to be replaced by others. There were two sets—one representing $500,000, the other $120,000. Some of the new bonds are now in litigation.

The board of aldermen meets to-night, and has a fair batch of business to dispose of.

The ways and means committee will meet this evening at 7 o'clock, in the auditor's office.

The water works board will hold its regular monthly meeting to-morrow evening.

The turning off of season contracts for sprinkling will begin to-morrow morning, by the water works board. These contracts last from May 16 to November 1.

A Growing Industry.

The Gendron Iron Wheel company has let contracts for the erection of a new seven-story building, to front 50 feet on Orange street, adjoining the present factory, and to be 100 feet deep. The work of preparing for the foundation has begun, and the building is to be completed by the first of January. In spite of the additional stories put upon the old building last year, the business of the company has increased to such an extent that more room is absolutely necessary, hence the new building, which will be principally devoted to the manufacture of a new bicycle invented by Mr. Gendron, and which will have several important improvements upon any wheel hitherto made.

ALMOST MURDER.

Joe Fournier Shoots James Goggins, the Gambler,

At the Corner of Summit and Adams Street.

Domestic Troubles and the Alleged Intimacy Between Mrs. Fournier and Goggins Culminate in an Almost Fatal Shooting Affray.

The well-known and popular saloonkeeper, Joe Fournier, occupies a cell at the police station to-day. On the blotter the charge of "suspicion" has been written against his name. Just what that word suspicion may be changed to in the course of a day or two it would be difficult to tell, but the chances are that it will be nothing serious.

Last evening Joe Fournier came pretty near committing murder outright. At about 8 o'clock he approached James Goggins and John Bolanger, two gamblers. Fournier stopped them and said something, then reached back for his revolver. Goggins surmised what he was after and grappled with Fournier.

With a superhuman effort, Fournier attempted to get the weapon in a position to fire. The gambler tried to turn it away. Both men were using their utmost strength. Finally Fournier managed to bring the revolver squarely in front of Goggins, and before either had time to make another move he pulled the trigger.

The bullet sped true to the mark, and Goggins, wounded in the abdomen, rushed forward into the street. Fournier followed him and fired again. The second bullet struck him in the neck. The unfortunate man then fell apparently lifeless on the car tracks, the blood spurting from two dangerous wounds.

Patrolman Dennis McCarthy was near by when the first shot was fired. He reached Fournier's side just as he fired the second shot and arrested him.

Goggins was taken to a room on Oak street, where Dr. Claypool dressed his wounds. Goggins swooned, and it looked as if he would not live. Chief of Police Raftz, Judge Sala and Detectives Carew and Hall arrived shortly, and the judge attempted to have Goggins make a statement, but he could not, or at least did not say much. At 10 o'clock last evening Goggins was taken to the Protestant hospital.

This morning Drs. Scheble, Parker, Claypool, Monroe and Manetz held a consultation, and agreed that it would be best, considering the patient's favorable condition, not to perform an operation. They have strong hopes of his recovery. He is doing nicely to-day.

At the police station this morning there was a perfect stream of visitors to see Fournier. They came singly, in twos and threes, and sometimes in bunches of five or six. All had messages of condolence and words of sympathy. Fournier talked through the bars as cheerily as was possible under the circumstances.

He was entertained by quite a number of newspaper men, but said nothing that leaned directly on the case. He had counsel in the persons of Lon G. Richardson and F. E. Wright, and probably thought best to say as little as possible now.

There are numerous conflicting stories as to the trouble that led up to the tragedy. Joe Fournier, as almost everybody knows, ran a saloon at 325 Cherry street. He married his wife a few years ago. She was a Miss Etta of Cleveland, a petite and very pretty woman, and was generally admired. Joe was very proud of her. It is said that he dressed her in the finest of garments, gave her everything that money could buy. They had a pleasant home in the Arlington flats.

Their home life, so say the other occupants of the flats, was not so pleasant as it might have been. Fournier would come home intoxicated, and at numerous times, it is said, treated his wife badly. She had the sympathy of the neighbors who took kindly to the little woman, enough perhaps she did have her faults.

Goggins is a gentleman gambler. He hails from Saginaw, where he has a wife and children. He is a handsome man and something of a masher. The ladies have not been in the habit of resisting him. Fournier and he were quite friendly. Fournier took him to his home and introduced him to his wife. Fournier alleges that a short time ago he found Goggins and his wife at Henrietta Andrews' house of assignation, at the corner of Huron and Oak streets. Last week Fournier filed a petition for a divorce.

Nothing will be done in the matter until it is seen how Goggins' injuries result.

THE WHEAT SITUATION.

An Elaborate Review Compiled by the American Agriculturist.

New York, Oct. 31.—The American Agriculturist, in its November number, prints an elaborate review of the wheat situation. It points out that exports from India are falling off and that Russian wheat is being held for an advance, and that the surplus for export from Australasia and South America is very small. The world's reserve supply was by no means made up by last year's heavy yield in the United States, and the replenishing of these reserves accounts for our enormous exports and the active foreign market at present. The Agriculturist's verification of the returns for 1892, by conference with state agencies for crop statistics, where such exist, and by its own system of reports, indicate a total wheat crop for 1892 of 494,434,000 bushels. It claims that the area of wheat has been greatly exaggerated, the yield per acre underestimated and the total crop reported at 5 to 15 per cent. more than was normally harvested. This year's total crop by states appears from the paper's review as follows: Pennsylvania 18, Ohio 31, Michigan 21, Indiana 34, Illinois 29, Minnesota 52, Iowa, 8, Nebraska 17, Missouri 24, Kansas 68, California 25, Dakota 66, other states 90. The area under cotton this year is also returned at 16,643,000 acres. The yield per acre is placed at 172 pounds, and the total crop is not much over 6,500,000 bales of a gross weight of 500 pounds per bale. This indicates a crop nearer 6,500,000 than 7,500,000 bales of 480 pounds per bale.

IN LABOR CIRCLES.

Open Meeting of the Central Labor Union.

The committee of the Central Labor union to arrange a program for the open meeting to be held November 22 has practically completed its work. There will be speeches by P. J. Maguire, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; T. J. Morgan, of Chicago, a man thoroughly versed in labor problems, and who is engaged to speak almost every night throughout the northwest; and Mrs. M. E. Dutton, of Toledo, who will deliver an address upon labor from a woman's standpoint. Miss Jennie Harris will render several songs and Mrs. John D. Irving, an elocutionist, will recite a few of her choice selections. A glee club will sing lively songs, and the public will be given three hours' amusement and instruction free of charge. The meeting will probably be held at Memorial hall.

A full attendance is expected at the meeting of the Carpenters' union, on Wednesday evening, to hear the report of the committee on the organization of a union in East Toledo.

THE VOTE OF NEW YORK

Will Be Cast for Grover Cleveland.

So Says Editor McClure of Philadelphia.

The Tide Is Turning Toward the Democratic Nominees in All Quarters.

New York, Oct. 31.—A. K. McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, sent to his newspaper the subjoined dispatch from this city:

"I now regard it as safe to say that New York state is irrevocably settled in the democratic column. Every development of the last ten days in this state, as elsewhere, has shown a positive and growing drift to Cleveland, and there is now no reasonable possibility of a revulsion against him. The fact that this steady tide toward Cleveland has been more general during the present time when the sincere sympathies of the whole American people have gone out to President Harrison in his sore bereavement, is an unerring index of the sober sentiment that is about to revolutionize the tariff policy of the republic.

"It is now confidently expected by the democrats here that Cleveland's majority in this city will be increased to figures exceeding the majority against him in the interior of the state four years ago, and Brooklyn will increase his majority of 1888 fully 5,000. The reports from the rural districts unmistakably indicate that Harrison will be fortunate if he shall maintain his former majority, and he is likely to come to Harlem Bridge with from 10,000 to 15,000 less. Such is the present estimate of the most careful and best informed leaders at democratic headquarters, and they have not reckoned without the most systematic and exhaustive inquiries into every district of the state.

"The republicans now practically concede the loss of New York, and it is an open secret that Senator Quay, after a full review of the situation from an inside standpoint, announced to the party managers that New York was hopelessly gone from them. Election betting has been rare in this contest, but bets of $100 to $70 and even at greater odds are now offered on New York for Cleveland without takers.

"It is the now apparent hopelessness of the republican case in New York that has made the party managers assault Connecticut, Delaware and West Virginia by every known method of political debauchery and coercion. The violent prostitution of the federal election law by supervisors in Delaware and Connecticut gives the people of these states and of the country generally a foretaste of what a force bill would mean, if enacted; but it seems next to certain that the vehemence of the assault made on Connecticut and Delaware will recoil on the republicans. The democrats of Connecticut are fully prepared for the boodle campaign that is upon them.

"The boodle disbursers will find plenty of democrats in the market ready to deal for spot cash. This method of meeting the boodlers has been considerately adopted and systematically organized in the center where money has been used in past contests, and the ballot debauchers who are to expend hundreds of thousands of dollars in Connecticut between this and election day will find plenty of customers. The boodle will be taken and the people who take it, as a rule, will vote for Cleveland and be safe against detection by the new secret ballot law. This is not ideal politics, but it is the only politics that can beat the boodle cheaters in their raids upon the integrity of the ballot.

"Four years ago the last fortnight of the campaign exhibited a steady line of breaks from the democratic ranks to Harrison. Not only manufacturers but farmers and business men of prominence maintained a continuous tide from Cleveland to Harrison. The country was terrorized by the phantom of free trade, and with very rare exceptions the changes were in favor of Harrison. Now, even the blindest republican leaders must see that the popular drift is reversed—that the most conspicuous political changes ever witnessed since the organization of the republican party are now in progress and all in favor of Cleveland.

"From college professors to workmen in shops, mills, mines, fields and forests there is a constant and ever growing tide for tariff reform, for equality of taxation, and for relief to our industries by removing the present oppressive and wanton taxes on the necessaries of business and of life. Seven republican cabinet ministers, going back to Abraham Lincoln's minister of finance, are now supporting Cleveland, and the most staggering blow of the campaign has just been delivered by Gen. Rea, late national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, and ex-Commander Clark, of New York, a maimed soldier and, until now, an earnest republican.

The notable feature of their revolt is the fact that they voice the honest veterans of the nation in supporting Cleveland's pension policy that would make our pension a roll of honor. This is the first break in favor of honest pensions to honest soldiers and against staining our worthy pensioners with the slime of the skulker and the thief."

WILL VOTE FOR CLEVELAND

Why a Republican Elector Resigned.

He Wanted to Cast His Vote for th Man Who Would Do His Country Good.

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 31.—The report that Dr. I. Dever Warner, millionaire corset manufacturer and philanthropist, has resigned from the board of presidential electors of this state is still the talk of the hour.

While Dr. Warner has always been a republican and is believed to have had an eye on a seat in congress, at the same time he has been a personal friend of the Clevelands, and Mrs. Cleveland assisted at the opening reception of the Warner Institute, established as a home for girls employed in his factory.

Concerning his resignation he is non-committal further than to say that it was because he is a national bank director. He denies having said he should vote for Cleveland, but admits the statement that protection has not helped his enormous business.

His son, Dever Warner, keeps all newspaper men from interviewing him and says the public must be contented with the above plain statement. To a friend the doctor said:

"I have given my reason for resigning. It is a sufficient reason and I do not care to go into extended details. How I vote is a matter in which I surely have a right to the exercise of my individual preference. I never have been an office-seeker or a political shouter. I will vote for the man whose election it seems to me will be for the best interests of the whole country, irrespective of the dictates of any party. I shall take no active part in politics this year and prefer not to say any more than I have said."

ERUPTION OF THE SKIN CURED.

Ed. Venney, Brockville, Ontario, Canada, says:

"I have used Brandreth's Pills for the past fifteen years, and think them the best cathartic and anti-bilious remedy known. For some five years I suffered with an eruption of the skin that gave me great pain and annoyance. I tried different blood remedies, but, although gaining strength the itching was unrelieved. I finally concluded to take a thorough course of Brandreth's Pills. I took six each night for four nights, then five, four, three, two, lessening each time by one, and then for one month took one each night, with the happy result that now my skin is perfectly clear and has been so ever since."

David Ormsby was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, a Washington C. H., for having illicit relation with his daughter.

ST. MARYS.

Miscellaneous News of General Interest.

St. Marys, O., Oct. 31.—(Special)—The fathers of the Society of Precious Blood held their annual meeting at Carthagenia, Mercer county, yesterday, which was well attended. The object of the meeting was to elect a spiritual father, and Rev. Father Henry Dress was selected. He has the entire order of the United States under his control.

The Brush Electric Light company have a large force of men at work on the construction of their plant here, and it will be in running order within 60 days. There will be over 75 arc lights scattered over the city and St. Marys will be one of the best lighted towns of its size in the state.

The vast amount of crude oil that flowed down the St. Marys river the other night, and almost threatened disaster, was caused by the bursting of the Manhattan Oil company's pipe line. Over eight hundred barrels of oil were lost before the leak could be checked.

A disastrous fire of incendiary origin occurred near Chickasaw, a village 10 miles southwest of this city, last night. The barn, woodhouse and residence of J. B. Schwetermann, a prominent farmer, were completely burned to the ground, together with all they contained. The loss is estimated at $8,000 with an insurance of $4,000.

The four-year-old daughter of Frank Howell, farmer of Liberty township, Mercer county, met with an awful death last night, by her clothes catching fire from the stove, against which she fell, while playing. Before assistance could reach her, she was burned to a crisp.

The first quarterly institute of Auglaize county teachers convened in this city yesterday with an attendance of over 100. An interesting program was carried out.

JUDGE JOHN P. REA,

Ex-Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R.,

Writes a Letter to the General Public.

He Tells Why He Will Cast His Vote This Fall for Grover Cleveland.

Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—Judge Rea's letter, declining to support Harrison for the presidency, is as follows:

The announcement that I had decided to vote for Mr. Cleveland was made without any authority from me and without my knowledge. Being a private citizen I only deemed it a matter of importance to myself how I should vote. I have freely and frequently during the past two years criticised many of the main features of the McKinley bill, as being at variance with the policy of protection, oppressive to the people, unfair in its distribution of such benefits as it affords, and the law itself as being enacted in the interest of the few against the many. The more I have watched its effect the more thoroughly have I been impressed with its evil purpose and tendency. The duty on steel and iron is 60 per cent. higher than demanded by the theory of protection applied to its fullest extent. That 60 per cent. is a wall behind which monopolies and trusts spring up, flourish and fatten at the expense of the American consumer.

The duty on wool and woolen fabrics adds at least 40 per cent. to the hundreds of millions of dollars' worth consumed each year by our people, while not to exceed one-eighth of that added cost reaches the United States treasury from collected duties. The duty on raw wool has a tendency to, and in a practical operation does, scale down the wages of the operatives in woolen factories.

The bounty of 2 cents per pound paid on sugar is to my mind a most pernicious and demoralizing feature. The planters of Louisiana last year drew from the treasury of the United States nearly $8,000,000 as bounty upon their sugar crop. Just why a planter in Louisiana who raises a crop of sugar worth $20,000 should receive as a reward for his industry $15,000 from the United States, while the farmer of Minnesota who raises $20,000 worth of wheat receives nothing is difficult to understand, for it must not be forgotten that the sugar industry of Louisiana is not an infant to be fostered to maturity. It is as old as the century it cannot stand alone now it never can in the future. But the thing is wrong in principle. It is a species of favoritism at war with the American idea of fair play. It is bad in morals, for it gives something for nothing.

The bounty in theory is to make up the difference in the cost of producing sugar in Louisiana and the West Indies. I have no figures at hand, but I venture the opinion that it amounts to more than the entire wages paid in raising and manufacturing the sugar. If the government reimbursed our wheat raisers for all the wages they pay in raising and preparing their crop for market, they might not find the burdens of taxation so grievous as they do to-day.

The foregoing are only a few of the unjust and unrighteous provisions of the existing tariff law. I am in favor of a radical reform in this direction, and believe that it should be accomplished speedily, and I shall vote accordingly. I have been subjected during the past two days to severe and unjust criticisms. All kinds of motives other than honest ones have been attributed to me. I can truthfully say that, although an active worker in the republican party since 1853, I never have asked a president of the United States for an office for myself. Every American citizen should vote in obedience to his convictions of duty and right. He who does not is not a good citizen.

Much has been said of my being a past officer of the G. A. R. That organization has no partisan politics in it. It is as free from any such characteristic as any church. It does teach men to be loyal to the country and to their convictions of duty. I shall never depart from those teachings or waver in my love for that organization. I am not able to comprehend why shouldering a musket in 1861 and fighting for nearly four years, obedience to my convictions of duty to free the slaves and save the republic, should now deprive me of the right of voting for the measures that I believe will best promote its continual prosperity in life.

The republican party in its early days was distinctively the party of the people. Its great leaders, Seward, Chase, Lincoln, Stevens and Sumner, were the champions of the men that toiled. They believed in "a government of the people, by the people and for the people." Its achievements under their leadership for the cause of mankind are unequaled in all the past. When the leaders of that great party seek to make our government one "of the people, by corporations and for monopolies and trusts," it is time for patriotic, liberty-loving men to stop and consider, if not to act. I have conscientiously done the former, and on the 8th of November shall do the latter. JOHN P. REA.

GENERAL STEVENSON

Writes His Letter of Acceptance.

A Document Everybody Should Read.

Cleve and Steve Will Make a Great Team to Trot Double for the Next Four Years.

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Adlai E. Stevenson, democratic candidate for the vice presidency, has sent the following letter of acceptance to the president of the national democratic convention:

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 29, 1892.

To the Hon. William L. Wilson, Chairman, etc.

When, in the presence of twenty thousand of my countrymen, I accepted the honor conferred upon me by the convention over which you presided, I promised to indicate by letter in a more formal manner my acceptance of the nomination tendered me by the assembled representatives of the democratic party of the United States.

Since that time I have been engaged continually in the discussion before the people of many states of the Union of the issues emphasized by the convention and represented by our candidate for president, Grover Cleveland. Opportunity has thus been denied me to write with care I would like the more formal answered promised your committee. The full discussion of public questions commonly expected from a candidate for vice president has been rendered less imperative by the complete presentation of the democratic creed by the gentleman with whom I have the honor to be associated as a candidate on the national ticket. His treatmen of the issues now before the country for discussion and settlement was so complete that I can do little more than endorse his position and give it the emphasis of my unqualified approval.

The greatest power conferred upon human government is that of taxation. All the great struggles of the past for a broader political liberty have looked toward the limitation of this power by right to tax, a right which should always be limited by the necessities of government and to benefits which may be shared by all. Whenever this power is used to draw tribute from the many or when part of the people are oppressed in order that the reminder may prosper unduly, equality is lost sight of, injustice hardens into precedent, which is used to excuse new exactions, and there arise artificial distinction which the beneficiaries come to look upon in due time as vested rights, sacred to themselves.

It is plain that our present inequitable system of tariff taxation has promoted the growth of such conditions in our land, favored though it has been by an industrious and enterprising people, a friendly climate, a productive soil, and the highest development of political liberty. If the beneficiaries of this system shall be able to add a new tenure of power to those they have already enjoyed, the development of these unfavorable conditions must continue, until the power to tax will be lodged in those who are willing and able to pay for the perpetuation of privieges originally conferred by a confiding people for the preservation inviolate of their own government. There is no longer pretext or excuse for the maintenance of war tariff in times of peace, and more than a quarter of a century after armed conflict has ceased. The platform of the national democratic convention demands the reform of this system and the adoption in its place of one which will insure equality to all our people. I am a full and hearty accorded with these purposes.

The convention also declared its position on the currency question in no unmeaning words when it said in its platform: "We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, and to the coinage of both gold and silver, without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage, but of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and unchangeable value, or be adjusted through international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the parity of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in payment of debt, and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin."

To this plain and unequivocal declaration in favor of sound honest money I subscribe without reservation or qualification. A safe circulating medium is absolutely essential to the protection of the business interests of our country while to the wage earner or the farmer it is all important that every dollar, whatever its form, that finds its way into his pocket, shall be of equal, unquestioned, and universally exchangeable value and of equal purchasing power.

Another issue of great moment in the pending contest is the force bill, the magnitude of which cannot be overstated. It may mean the control of the election of representatives in congress by the bayonet. The republican party, by its acts in the Fifty-first congress, and by its platform in its late national convention, stands pledged to the passage of this bill. That it will pass it when it has the power, no sane man can doubt. To all our people who desire the peace and prosperity of our common country this question is all important.

Since my nomination I have been in eight of the southern and southwestern states of the union, and have talked with men of all classes and conditions there. I found a general and growing apprehension of evils which it is believed would result from the passage of the Lodge bill or similar threatened legislation. I found that the industries established by northern capital during Mr. Cleveland's administration were in a languishing condition, that the immigration of labor and the nvestment of capital invited to those states by their then peaceful condition, had in a large measure ceased. The enactment of the force bill into a law, while it would threaten the liberties of the entire people, would undoubtedly retard the material growth of the states at which it is specially aimed; would incite in many communities, race troubles, and invite retaliatory legislation, which would disturb property values and discontinue and destroy the security of northern investments. And its inflex action upon the northern states would result in consequent loss of commercial trade relations with the vast territory now becoming tributary to their wealth and prosperity.

I say nothing now of the inherent vice of the un-American and revolutionary spirit involved in the Lodge bill, which was pronounced by a republican senator "the most infamous that ever crossed the threshold of the senate." I appeal to the instinct of self-interest and to the sense of common justice in the American people. The era of good feeling and renewed commercial relations commencing with the election of Mr. Cleveland in 1884 should not be interrupted by the inauguration of a policy which tends to destroy popular representation and the purity of local self-government, which furnishes an instrument to discredited federal power to perpetuate itself, which seeks to keep alive sectionly jealousies and strife, which threatens important and material interests, and which offers no excuse or palliation for its existence except the perpetuation in power of a political party which has lost public confidence.

I accept the nomination tendered me, and should the action of the convention meet the approval of my countrymen, will to the best of my ability, discharge with fidelity the duties of the important trust confided to me. Very respectfully,

ADLAI E. STEVENSON.

KEPT HIS WORD.

St. Marys, O., Oct. 31.—After remarking, "I am going to kill myself," William Walters, a young unmarried farmer, 35 years of age, living near here, procured a shot gun and repairing to an adjoining cornfield, he emptied the entire charge into his left side, causing death almost instantly. STRANGELY MISSING.

Was Ex-Mayor Weimerskirch a Cholera Victim?

Upper Sandusky, O., Oct. 31.—(Special)—During the past summer and fall ex-Mayor Weimerskirch, of Kirby, this county, has been touring the old country. About the time of the cholera scare he started for home.

Since then nothing has been heard from him.

Saturday it was rumored about that he was taken with cholera enroute and buried at sea.

Mr. Weimerskirch is a prominent resident of this county and the rumor has created considerable excitement.

Hon. T. D. Lanker and A. K. Smalley addressed a democratic meeting in Tymochtee township last Friday evening. There was a large turnout and considerable enthusiasm manifested.

WAPAK NOTES.

Wapakoneta, O., Oct. 31.—(Special)—Yesterday afternoon fire destroyed all the outbuildings and barns on the farm of Jacob Ice, just at the edge of town. Five hundred bushels of wheat, a quantity of other grain and all his farm machinery were consumed. Loss will reach $3,000, with little insurance.

E. G. Stanley, who was arrested the other day for embezzlement, has been released, Porter & Davis, his employers, withdrawing their affidavit on his making good the shortage in his accounts, which was $225.

A REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR

Who Will Vote for Grover Cleveland.

John D. Chamberlain Takes a Stand With the Democratic Party.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—John D. Chamberlain, at one time a republican governor of South Carolina, but now a resident of New York city, spoke here at the Academy of Music before a large audience upon the issues of the campaign.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Tariff Reform association, an independent political organization of this city, which believes in the reduction of the revenue duties.

In his speech Mr. Chamberlain said that he first advocated the election of Mr. Cleveland and secondly the success of the democratic party. Mr. Chamberlain said he owed no allegiance to any party now, that he was an independent, and that he supported the democracy in this campaign from the belief that its principles were the best for the welfare of the people.

Mr. Chamberlain divided his speech into four parts and took up seriatim the tariff, civil service, the free coinage of silver and the "force bill."

He opposed the principle of protection entirely and advocated a duty for revenue only. He strongly opposed the free coinage of silver and said that upon this question President Harrison had drifted with his party, as was shown by his approval of the Sherman silver bill.

In opposition to the course of President Harrison Mr. Chamberlain said that Mr. Cleveland still maintained his firm stand against a debasement of the currency. Civil service was warmly upheld by Mr. Chamberlain, and he drew comparisons between the course of Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Harrison in fulfilling their parties' pledges in regard to government employes.

The "force bill," in Mr. Chamberlain's opinion, is not an important issue in the campaign, as he believes no party would now dare to pass it in the face of the opposition developed throughout the country when that measure was before congress.

IF THE POLICE

Department Had Done Its Duty at First.

There Would Have Been No Trouble —Arthur Cowdrick, the House Mover, Will Be Prosecuted.

If Chief of Police Raitz had attended to his business properly there would have been none of this trouble about the cutting of trees on Madison street by house mover, Arthur Cowdrick. The chief was notified when the sawing commenced. He promised to look after it. The trees were not saved, however. The people of Madison street are highly indignant and citizens in general are angry. The whole thing was a piece of underhanded dirty business.

Cowdrick knew he was doing wrong, for he worked after dark and at night. Mayor Emmick is to be commended on his action. He will have Cowdrick arrested.

It seems the mayor first grants a general license to a house mover. This he granted to Cowdrick April last, Cowdrick furnishing a bond of $2,000.

All this trouble could have been prevented had the police department performed its duty in the first place.

HENRY COUNTY DOINGS

Much Interest Shown in This District.

Napoleon Would Like to Swell Ritchie's Vote.

Interesting Telegrams From the Bee's Bright Reporter Up the Wabash.

Napoleon, O., Oct. 31.—(Special.)—Inasmuch as this community is situated in a congressional district where democratic success is certain, what attention is left after speculating on Dennis Donovan's majority is devoted to the war of our neighboring Toledo district. Prominent politicians here, life-long acquaintances of both Ritchie and Ashley (particularly with the latter's record) are keen to secure bets on democratic success. Humphrey's drug store of late has answered the purpose of an old-time forum wherein the political issues are discussed with a fairness and logic that leaves no doubt in the mind of one who has the faculty of being a good listener.

"I will go $100 on Ritchie's election," a prominent attorney said the other evening, "and I am not one who is in the habit of throwing money away. With due deference to you all, as far as political intelligence is concerned, let me say that I have watched politics very closely for the last 40 years and am conversant with the signs of the times, and if there is any cogency in the old adage that "coming events cast their shadows before," the democrats will undergo the sensation of unprecedented success this year, and especially so in the Toledo district.

"To be sure, the republicans down there have 1,700 good round majority as a starter, but when the innumerable hoodoos and whole families of skeletons that are rising up like a regiment of Banquo's ghosts, and are surrounding the notorious Ashley, are taken note of, his little 1,700 will be chisled down to nothing! Nor will the work cease there. Ashley's political record as a flopper has created a wholesome contempt among his party that will speak on election day despite his barr'l and the prophecy of his son that 'Pa will get there without the aid of the old 'uns.'

"Then again, aside from the democrats being in the right, circumstances are playing largely in their favor. I have known Ashley for decades personally. At one time when it was customary to make a canvass from house to house, he was considered a politician and indeed did some good work—for himself—and it is well known that at present he is expecting that his prestige gained then, with the aid of a barrel, will win for him this fight. The people know this. He is not popular among his own party. The people also know this. His work for Toledo, which is comparatively nothing, has been vented, thus leaving him absolutely no reason why at this time of life he can consistently ask the suffrages of electors.

"On the other hand, the people see in Ritchie the typical, able and hustling congressman who will not only represent a large constituency in name, but in fact. He is young, very popular and is not a railroad magnate, and will not play his hand into railroad corporations for his own personal aggrandizement. Add to this that he has in the Toledo Bee a worthy exponent of his good qualities, and how his election is even doubtful, I can not understand. It is clearly a case of a young and talented man with a clean record versus an old man in his dotage bearing a record of several generations political crookedness."

This little dissertation was followed with the offer repeated to bet a hundred on Ritchie's success, but no takers were in sight.

Good Work.

The past week has been very productive of good work for the democracy in Henry county, and the outlook points to everything coming our way. Campaign education is going rapidly on. Saturday at Holgate a pole raising took pleace in the afternoon followed in the evening by some most excellent talks on the political issues of the day by Hon. Dennis D. Donovan, candidate for congress from the Fifth, and Hon. J. W. Winn of Defiance.

The crowd was large and enthusiastic, and listened to the speeches with absorbed interest. Presented as they were in a logical, terse and convincing manner, the speeches were beneficial to the cause of democracy and right.

At Colton on the same evening Representative Meyers and Hon. B. F. Enos of Defiance, held a large crowd by presentations of truths on politics until a late hour.

Also, in Freedom township at the Walcott school house on Saturday evening, Hon. J. V. Cuff, Editor Evers, and Matthias Reiser vividly portrayed to a large crowd of hearers the manifold evils of a protective policy and the great good to be worked with the return of the democrats to power. The latter two gentlemen spoke in both German and English.

For this and next week, among others there will be rallies at Liberty Center, Saturday evening, speakers J. W. Winn and B. F. Enos of Defiance; at McClure Monday evening, November 7, speakers J. W. Winn and Judge Barker of Defiance; Nalinta, Saturday evening, Judge Barker and Lawyer Frank Rummell.

Three Sleepless Nights

MARLBORO, Ohio, April 14, 1892.

The Hand Medicine Co.

DEAR SIRS:—Having used nearly four bottles of your Colic Cure, I forward you this testimonial, hoping it may benefit many mothers with suffering babies. I am the happy mother of triplets, all girls; now 14 weeks old. When they were about 3 weeks old they were taken with a very severe attack of wind colic. There were three days and nights I had two of them in my arms nearly all the time. I tried all the remedies I had ever heard of without any relief. A sample of your Colic Cure was handed me, which I used with the very best results, and I sent for more at once and I shall recommend it to every mother. I feel there is no language strong enough to express its value. I have also used several of the other Remedies and found each to be exactly as you represented them to be. I trust the Lord will forever bless you for procuring a remedy to relieve suffering innocence.

Took Her on a Truck.

This morning a Morton truck to which were attached four powerful horses left the Wonderland for the Union depot, where Big Eliza was in waiting in a baggage car. She cannot get her ponderous bulk in an ordinary carriage, and if she could she would demolish the rig with her weight.

A BUNCH OF DATES.

A Number of Meetings for the Coming Week.

The Woman's Building company met Saturday afternoon in the Bee editorial rooms, with a small number of ladies present.

Mrs. Ridenour presided, Mrs. Wheeler, secretary.

The meeting was for the purpose of receiving reports as to whether the clubs interviewed were favorable to the project, and a number reported that should a building be erected in a central locality, and rooms suitable to the needs of the societies be furnished, they would be in favor of making their headquarters there.

It was decided to continue the canvass, and sale of stock, and the ladies present signified their willingness to see ladies holding books, and who hardly ever attend the meetings, and try to awaken their enthusiasm and interest.

The next meeting will be held in two weeks, Saturday afternoon, November 12.

After tendering a vote of thanks to the proprietors of the Bee, for the use of the rooms, the meeting adjourned.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church will give a Hallowe'en social in the church parlors this evening.

The Home Aid association meets tomorrow (Tuesday) evening, in Odd Fellows' Temple.

The Toledo Woman's Suffrage association holds the monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in room 9, Fort Industry block.

The Isabella circle meets November 15, with Mrs. Rooney, 835 Superior street.

TWO WOMEN FIGHT.

Battle for Blood at the Corner of Superior and Madison.

Jealousy Said To Be the Cause of An Exciting Melee in Which Two Women Are the Principles.

It was Marquis of Quensberry to a finish.

Mrs. Frank Bolter, wife of the night clerk at the Hamilton, and Mrs. Ed H. Dewey, wife of a clerk in the office of the Southwest Dispatch, had an exciting fistic encounter this afternoon at the corner of Madison and Superior streets.

Dewey, it appears, lodges with the Bolters at their rooms on Madison street.

Dewey and Mrs. Bolter were at dinner at the Hamilton to-day and after dinner left the hotel together.

At the corner of Madison and Superior Superior streets the couple ran into Mrs. Dewy, who, it appears, was waiting for them.

The man skipped and Mrs. Dewey, without a word, caught Mrs. Bolter by the hair.

Mrs. Bolter screamed and the guests at the Hamilton dining room., attracted by the screams, made a break for the streets.

It was a battle for blood. Mrs. Bolter was no match for her antagonist and struggled and fought in vain.

An immense crowd gathered, while the two women screamed and scratched and pulled each other's hair.

Dewey in the meantime had hidden.

As he saw his wife he knew she meant mischief, and he said:

"That's my wife, and I mustn't get into this scrape."

The women were finally separated.

Mrs. Bolter crossed the street and entered Dr. Coldham's office, where her injuries were attended to. The little woman was undoubtedly hurt, but she was more frightened than injured.

Mrs. Dewey started down Madison towards Summit street, but returned in a few minutes and went on down Madison towards home.

Mr. Dewey and Mrs. Bolter have eaten regularly at the Hamilton and nothing singularly was thought of it.

Mrs. Dewey says her husband left her about three weeks ago and went to live with the Bolters. This is the chief cause of the trouble.

Dewey's action in running away was roundly condemned by the crowd.

The melee caused a good deal of excitement in the vicinity, and the large crowd stood around and talked the scene over with evident relish.

Task in Progress As the Bee Goes to Press.

Promptly at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Bailiff Whitten convened court in Judge Harmon's room, and the wheels of justice were set to grind on the second of the bribery indictments.

Mr. Barber requested that Thomas Tracy be appointed assistant prosecutor, which was granted.

F. E. Wright, attorney for Gill, announced that Judge Ritchie would be associated with him in the defense, vice Mr. Ford, who withdrew.

The clerk then called the roll of the jury, as announced in the Bee Saturday. All were present and sworn to answer questions as to qualification and the state proceeded with the examination of the panel.

He began with William Bell. He had read of the case in the papers. He had not formed an opinion. He knew none of the defendants.

He was hard of hearing, which was the only reason he knew of why he could not try the case.

Homer Hood had read of the case, but had not formed any opinion. No one had approached him about the case.

Charles B. Darling knew the defendant, and had formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of Mr. Gill and that he had based it upon what he had read in the newspapers. He could render a verdict according to the evidence in the case and rules of the court.

Geo. E. McBride said he had formed an opinion, on what he had read, but could be governed emphatically by the evidence in the case.

Wm. E. Cratz was personally acquainted with Mr. Gill. He had read the newspapers and formed an opinion, and claimed an exemption on a certificate of membership in the O. N. G. The certificate was dated October 26, and the jury list was made up October 24 and struck October 29.

Mr. Cratz was excused and James T. Losee was called. He did not know Mr. Gill; had read of the case; knew other of the defendants; he had formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt of all of them. He did not think the evidence could change his opinion.

Charles E. Cameron had formed an opinion as to the guilt of Mr. Gill and of all the others, and still maintained the same opinion. He said it was hard to tell whether he could lay aside his opinion and be governed according to the evidence in the case. He attended the Daly trial each day, a short time.

To the question as to whether he would if sworn as a juror render a verdict according to the evidence and law in the case, Mr. Cameron said he would.

Charles Skelly did not know any of the defendants, and could render a verdict according to the evidence introduced.

It is probable that there will be no difficulty in obtaining a jury.

Andrew W. Heitzman said he had talked with the defendants, that one or two of them were personal friends of his. He had formed an opinion as to Mr. Gill's guilt, and expressed it and he did not believe he could render a verdict according to the evidence.

THE BLADE ON ASHLEY.

"Corrupt and shameless conduct in employing his official position to secure the appointment of a man to an important territorial office for the avowed and exclusive purpose of feathering his own nest with ill-gotten and illegal gains."—Blade, Sept. 18, 1862.

Judge Scribner should be kept on the circuit bench. Bear this in mind.

Gen. Stevenson has written his letter of acceptance. It is brief, to the point, and has the proper sound.

Study the table of harbor appropriations at the head of this column, and measure Ashley's worth to Toledo.

Byron Ritchie's election means much for Toledo's harbor, instead of that of Frankfort, Mich. Vote for Ritchie.

A united democracy will win. The party this year is in harmonious working order, hence the confidence in success.

The telegraphic news from South Carolina shows what the republican party would do with a force bill if they had one.

All voters desiring a pure and economical administration of public affairs will cast their suffrages for Grover Cleveland.

This is the last week of the campaign. Democrats can do much in it for the success of the whole ticket. Let's do it with a will.

Ex-Governor Chamberlain, republican, of South Carolina, is stumping Pennsylvania for Grover Cleveland and tariff reform.

Editor McClure, of Philadelphia, has spent two weeks in New York state, and regards the vote as irrevocably solid for Cleveland.

Vote for J. H. Wylie for councilman in the Second ward. He is the democratic nominee, and competent to perform the duties of the office.

Is it merely a coincidence that the schooner Zack Chandler went to pieces in the same storm that is to sweep the republican party on the rocks?

Some of these 30,000 republican majority fellows would be rather disappointed if Ohio was carried by the democrats, and yet this is liable to be the case.

Mr. J. H. Wylie, nominated by the democrats for councilman in the Second ward, is a pushing, enterprising young man, with sound judgment. Elect him.

When republican electors resign in order to vote for Grover Cleveland, it looks very much as if the republican ship was rapidly drifting on to the rocks of total destruction.

In his speech in Chicago, ex-Governor Foraker stated that this was a "business man's campaign." He will find that the laboring man has taken a hand when the votes are counted.

President Grant's attorney-general, B. H. Bristow, writes to the press that he is not a democrat but will vote for Grover Cleveland. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Judge John P. Rea, life-time republican, and ex-commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, gives his reasons for voting for Cleveland in this issue. It will prove interesting reading to republicans.

Byron Ritchie will spend most of this week in Wood county, where he will help the local ticket with his happy and instructive speeches. He presents the democratic cause in a telling manner.

It it a question whether Frank Rickenbaugh or Jim Southard can write the best dunning letter. Frank's has one quality in its favor, it is brief and to the point, "Put up 2 per cent. or go on the list."

One of the next public improvements to be thought of seriously is a new Y. M. C. A. building. There has been enough talk about the structure; let arrangements be made to erect. The way to build is to build.

Senator Gorman, as shrewd a political calculator as is to be found in the country, gives it as his opinion that New York, New Jersey and Connecticut are as safe for Cleveland and Stevenson as Maryland.

Mr. Mathew Bartlett, the Pythians and others are now getting some credit for their foresight in building out Jefferson street. The thoroughfare is destined to be one of the liveliest in the city before long.

The nominees on the democratic county ticket are qualified for the positions for which they have been nominated. Messrs. Kohn, Gibbs, Gates and Root are well known citizens, worthy of support. Vote for all of them.

It is a little strange that the orators of the federal building have not been invited to take the stump for Ashley. The matter of civil service rules can count for very little when fat-frying committees are allowed to levy tax on the employes.

Coal merchants will do a better business this winter than they have done since the introduction of natural gas. In lower town several residents have gone back to the use of the black diamonds rather than suffer the disappointments of last season.

The Ashleys propose to begin the work of turning down republicans next spring. Their first victim is to be Mayor Emmick, because he refused to desert Kent Hamilton. The Jims may nominate, but the people do the voting, as will be seen next Tuesday.

A concerted movement is being made among the old-line republicans to defeat Ashley. One who has seen the agreement informs the Bee that up to this morning there were over fifty signatures on the document. The purpose is a very laudable one indeed.

New York policemen are to be deprived of their clubs after November 15. Superintendent Byrnes says "the change will place the policeman on a more friendly footing with the civilian, as he should be." It would not be a bad idea for the Toledo board to banish the stick.

Secretary Charley Foster will talk at Bowling Green and Fostoria, in this neck of woods. The Ninth district is past redemption for the republicans, and Charley is so well known in Fostoria as a smooth gentleman that but little if any attention will be paid to him.

Grover Cleveland's election means much for the average taxpayer. His success will be a death blow to the Carnegies, the Fricks, and kindred spirits. Carnegie's interest in Harrison is all for the benefit of the workingman, of course. Homestead furnishes an illustration.

Blacklisting of employes is one of Ashley's pet practices. Railroad men have felt its effects, and have been compelled to travel miles to secure situations. Several of the victims of the blacklist are in the city laboring to keep Mr. Ashley at home, and they are doing their work well. Success to them.

Two years ago the stock arguments for Ashley were similar to those now being used. Toledo was sure to be blotted off the face of the earth if he did not succeed. Well, Ashley was not elected, and the Future Great still lives. Mr. Haynes is a much better congressman than Mr. Ashley proved himself to be when at Washington. Byron Ritchie can discount the pompous gentleman for usefulness, and he will be elected. Vote for Ritchie.

Abraham Lincoln was all right, and to be his friend was an honor. But there is something of more vital importance involved in the present canvass than alleged friendship for the great emancipator. The interests of the Ninth district are at stake. There is much to be done to aid in its continued prosperity. The district is large enough to require the most active man's attention, without any division of time for Michigan's harbors. By electing Mr. Ritchie the district will secure a representative whose only aim will be to do everything in his power for its advancement. Vote for Byron Ritchie.

ENCOURAGING.

The following is an extract from a letter received by Mr. M. M. Eppstein from Hon. W. H. Harrity, chairman of the democratic national committee:

"You will doubtless be glad to learn that the political outlook in New York state is of a particularly gratifying character. The democratic leaders here feel entirely confident of their ability to have New York cast her electoral vote for Cleveland and tSevenson. The information we have of Indiana and Connecticut is equally favorable."

THE SCHOOL BOARD EMBROGLIO.

Six years ago the people found it an imperative necessity to clean out the Augean stables connected with the school board. The cleansing was prompt and thorough, and the former efficiency of the institution was restored by the operation. Another weeding out process is evidently necessary. Would-be reformers, whose mission is to tear down and destroy the excellent work of Superintendent Compton, must be relegated to a back seat. The people are not easily moved to action, particularly in matters so close to the hearts and interests of parents as are the public schools, but when they act it is with an irresistible movement that sweeps all before it.

The people will not tolerate intolerance on the part of their servants, and will rebuke, sternly and promptly, any attempt to interfere with the constitutional rights of citizens.

In the school board there is no room for narrowness or bigotry, and the present imbroglio has evidently had its origin and birth in these undesirable vices.

Now that attention has been called to this matter, it is to be hoped that more interest will be taken in the workings of this important board.

There is room for many improvements in the personnel of the membership, and these improvements will be made.

POLITICAL TANGLES.

Seneca Republicans Jump Over the Traces.

They Refuse to Obey the Order of the Courts, and Print Ridgely's Name.

Tiffin, O., Oct. 31.—(Special)—The republican election deputies for this county have set at defiance the orders of Judge Johnson, restraining the mfrom printing election tickets with the name of J. H. Ridgely as a candidate for common pleas judge, in the people's party column, it having been established that no such nomination was ever made, and they are printing the tickets.

The democratic deputies will print tickets without Ridgeley's name in the people's party column.

Vote Right.

No democrat, or republican, either, for that matter, can vote amiss by voting for Charles H. Scribner for circuit judge. He is the best man by far for that office.—Sandusky Journal.

RED HOT.

The Leading German Paper of the Country

Scores Ashley and Urges His Defeat.

Mr. F. Schade, of the Washington Sentinel, Says Ashley Should Be Defeated—Germans, Read This!

Mr. F. Schade, representing the Washington Sentinel, one of the leading American-German papers in the country, was in Toledo yesterday en route home from a western trip.

Speaking of Mr. Ashley's campaign in this district, Mr. Schade denounced the great impeacher in unmeasured terms as an arch enemy of the American German.

"This article from our paper," said he, "expresses my sentiments exactly," and he handed the Bee the following stirring editorial from the Sentinel:

In the Toledo (Ohio) congressional district the republicans have nominated for congress James M. Ashley. That man must not be elected. Here the reasons:

Ashley was a member of the Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh, Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth and Fortieth congresses. He was one of the bitter radicals who hated the restoration of the union and would have kept the south in subjugation for centuries. In his eyes the people of that section were nothing by Helots. No man fought reconstruction on a human basis more than he.

It was James M. Ashley who, January 7, 1867, offered the impeachment resolution against President Andrew Johnson in the house. Those resolutions were based upon the charge that Johnson had been too liberal towards the south. Ashley was made, at the impeachment trial, one of the managers on the part of the house, of which he was one of the Jacobin faction.

But he was also a know-nothing. At the July session of congress in 1867 he introduced an amendment to the constitution, which says:

After 4th of July, 1876, all citizens of the United States, thereafter becoming 21 years of age, and all who may thereafter be naturalized, shall be required to read and write the English language as a qualification to vote.

During the Fortieth congress Grant appointed the Jacobin governor of Montana. The people did not like him there and he returned to Toledo. But there he also became odious and his former constituents dropped him, and ever since, for over 20 years, he has been in the cold.

Now, believing that his past has been forgotten, the old know-nothing Jacobin tries to sneak into the capitol once more! Let that old impeacher remain where he is now. Washington is no place for him any more! That devilish hatred that once filled, or is even now filling, his breast, has given away to Christian forbearance and charity here, and our people do not wish a revival of the impeachment and reconstruction times. The Ashleys belong to the past. There is no reconstruction for them.

ANENT THE CAMPAIGN.

That's What You Say.

Lord Byron Ritchie, the democratic nominee for congress, is booked to speak at Bowling Green on Tuesday evening next, November 1. Byron is a handsome rooster, bright and witty; but he can't make much of a speech; is not popular with the big wing of his party in Toledo and cannot be elected.—Bowling Green Sentinel.

Toledoans Denouncing McKinley.

Thomas A. Taylor, of Toledo, first came out in a card in the Bee giving his reasons for leaving the republican party and supporting Cleveland. Shortly after came Mr. Quale, and Thursday C. H. Pixley came out in an article giving his reasons for refusing to support Harrison and why he would support Cleveland. These men are all leading and prominent lifelong republicans of Toledo, and the republican party in that city has no more prominent, honest or reliable men. They openly denounce the McKinley system of robbery, giving undeniable proofs that it is robbing them and the farming and laboring community of this country as well as everybody but a few protected industries.—Ottawa County Exponent.

Ashley's Record.

Much good may be attributed to either Ritchie or Ashley. Both are gentlemen of ability. But when we vote on November 8 for a man to represent the Ninth district in our national congress let us cast our ballots for the best man. Ritchie has always been a steadfast democrat of unflinching and uncompromising firmness. He is young and ambitious, influential and a ready speaker. He could represent his constituency with great credit and would work zealously for his district for sake of future attainments. He can be relied upon as an appreciative friend whose best endeavors will be given to those who favor him with their votes. On the other hand Ashley is fickle and unsubstantial except in a financial way. He has belonged to every party we have have had since he was old enough to vote. He's a bolter, a kicker, a squirmer, a boodler and a bulldozer upon republican authority.—North Baltimore Times.

Ashley Looked At in Ottawa County.

How can any fair thinking republican vote for Ashley? He has denounced them within a few years as strongly as any democrat has and has only gone to the republicans in the hopes of office. Two years ago they gave him the nomination simply because no good republican desired to contest with Col. Haynes, who had a good majority backing him. This year when the majority was reversed and honest, hardworking and deserving republicans asked for it, Mr. Ashley stepped in and bought the nomination. There is no secret about this, everybody knows it, and what an inducement it offers to young men of limited wealth. It is an avowed declaration by every man that supports Ashley that brains or merit must stand back, public office is only for the wealthy men who can buy them. What a bright prospect for the laboring and ambitious young man; what a commentary on education, and merit, or the prospects of ambitious and deserving men; the man who may have robbed or stolen his wealth from the people buys the public places or trust to enact laws to increase his wealth. If the republican voters of this district have the manhood to resent an insult they will vote against Ashley. If they ever desire to fill a public office they must stamp out this infamous doctrine that offices in the gift of the republican party are only for the man who will pay the most for them.—Ottawa County Exponent.

TRUTH IN SONG.

(Tune: "Sotts Wha Ha!")

Friends of right, opposed to wrong,
Raise your voices loud and long—
Drown "Protection" with your song—
And brand it as a Lie!!
Why "Protect" the tyrant knave,
And become his servile slave,
Just to fill a pauper's grave?
No! His power defy.

Stand up bravely in the fight—
Choose not darkness, but the light,
For you know your cause is right—
"Free-Trade on all you eat,"
Principles that we declare—
Legislation that is fair—
Deal with all exactly square,
An honest, noble feat.

Nail your colors to the mast,
Free-Trade Nails will make them fast—
To the breeze these colors cast,
And sail on like men.
Grover Cleveland is the man,
With the aid of Stevenson,
To carry out this honest plan—
So vote for both of them.

OHIO NEWSPAPER COMMENT.

Got a Match.

An Ohio match factory turns out 57,000,000 matches a day, and yet the question, "Got a match?" is almost as common as "How are you?"—Columbus Dispatch.

Should Taboo.

Boodle fried out of the protected favorites of the republicans is the only republican hope. The man who will sell his vote this year is worse than a heathen and doesn't deserve to live in a free country.—Fayette Register.

The Silver Rule Applied.

It must be humiliating to Mr. Harrison after kicking Blaine out of the cabinet, to get down on his knees and beg him to aid in his election. Blaine can afford to be charitable towards Harrison, but he is not built on that plan.—Bellaire Democrat.

No Takers At That.

Michael F. Dwyer, the noted horseman, has put up $10,000 against $7,000 that Cleveland will be elected. The drift of the betting is all that way in New York, where this bet was made, yet but few takers can be had at this heavy odds.—Sandusky Journal.

A Great Bluff.

Some of the big iron mills threaten to close down in case of Mr. Cleveland's election. This is an old ante-election "gag" and does not affect the vote of a single person who has sense enough to know how to vote. The same thing was threatened four years ago, and several of them did shut down after Mr. Harrison was elected, and very nearly all of them cut down the wages of their men.—Dayton Times.

Subject for Physical Research.

A discussion has been going on in the society for physical research as to the existence and the nature of the power by which so many people manage to wake themselves precisely at the hour at which they resolve to wake on the previous night. It might be of even greater interest if the society should explain how it is that after a man has thus wakened himself and decided on taking five minutes more some power compels him to sleep an hour longer.—Columbus Press.

Sherman Rules the Roast.

There can be no dobt whatever but that the election of the republican ticket in Ohio this fall would be as much of a triumph of Shermanism over that party itself as it would be a victory over the democratic party. In the senatorial contest last winter as well as the contest for nomination of state offices this summer, the anti-Sherman men were given to understand that every time one of them stuck his head up he would have it hit with a club. The republican state ticket is the creation of John Sherman and his organization, and the republican who votes for that ticket is not voting for the principles of his party, but he is voting for the republican oligarchy that rules the party in Ohio and dictates who shall fill every state and government office in the state. The republicans in Ohio know this, they dare not deny it.—Shelby County Democrat.

THE REGISTRATION.

An Increase of Nearly Fifteen Per Cent.

The Total This Year Is 18,827 Against 16,398 Last Year, a Gain of 2,429.

The registrars returned their books to the board of elections this morning, after the work of the last two days of regular registration, and the total registration shows an encouraging increase over that of last year. On Friday and Saturday the names of 6,982 voters were registered, which number added to the registration of the first two days, 11,845, makes a total of 18,827, as against 16,398 last year; 13,951 in 1890; 12,731 in 1889, and 14,433 in 1888, the last presidential year.

The largest registration was in Ward Seven, 3,141; the next in order being Ward Eight, 3,076; Ward One, 2,461; Ward Six, 2,173; Ward Five, 1860; Ward Three, 1,720; Ward Nine, 1,683; Ward Four, 1,431, and Ward Two, 1,282.

The ward showing the greatest gain is Ward Eight, with 478, and closely following is Ward Seven, with 474, the others in order being, Ward One, 350; Ward Six, 334; Ward Five, 329; Ward Nine, 272; Ward Four, 124, Ward Two, 44; and Ward Three only 24. Precinct B of the Second ward shows a decrease of seven.

The total gain in the city, 2,429, shows an increase over last year of nearly 15 per cent. The democrats hold that the gain is largely in their favor. A close scrutiny in precinct B of Ward Five satisfies the actuaries that of the 322 votes there registered 166 are democratic and 94 republican, the other 62 being prohibition, people's party and doubtful voters. There are many other precincts in which the proportion of democratic votes has considerably increased and that of the republicans decreased.

The registration of the regular days will be changed somewhat by the secretary of the board, which may take a few names off; but quite a number will be added by orders from the board to those who were unavoidably prevented from registering on the regular days. For the purpose of granting such orders the board will be in session at 9 o'clock next Monday morning at its rooms in the Nasby building, and Secretary King said this morning that as ample opportunity as possible will be given delinquents, in view of the importance of a presidential election.

Under the law no such order shall be made or considered except in joint session of the board, nor unless the applicant shall appear personally and prove to the satisfaction of th eboard that he could not, by due diligence, have appeared before the registrars in his proper precinct on either of the regular days of registration, and shall furthermore comply with all the prescribed requirements of general registration.

To register the names of persons to whom such orders are granted, the registrars will meet at the booths in the various precincts, from 3 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. They shall then also receive and act upon applications for either granting or receiving certificates of removal or correction of mistakes. If any material error or mistake in the description of any elector has been discovered he may appear, and on good cause shown the registrars may make correction.

HALLOWE'EN.

Get Ready for a Remembrance of It This Evening.

This is the evening which precedes All Saints' day or Hallowe'en. Hallowe'en is thought to be a night when witches, devils and other mischief-making beings are all abroad on their baneful midnight errands. So, beware, for Toledo's young people promise to make things lively. The performance of spells by young people to discover their future partners for life, and certain fireside revelries—cracking chestnuts, ducking for apples, etc., are events of the occasion, to say nothing of the extra number of cabbages with which you are apt to be infested. Chloroform your door bell; hide your gate, if you have one, and prepare for pranks.

Numerous church socials and Hallowe'en parties are on the tapis. Among the entertainers are Mr. Will Bishop, Miss Carrie Jewett, Miss Carrie Rutter, Miss Maud Peckham, Mrs. Ed Curtis, Miss Lillie Hildebrand, Miss Nora Mutchler, the Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church, and the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Central Congregational.

Oregon Township S. S. Association.

As a result of the conference held on Saturday, a Sunday School association has been formed with a good membership. Officers elected are as follows: President, Mrs. Norma Douglass; vice-president, George Peach; secretary, Mrs. Ida Cook. Messrs. A. R. Crittenden, M. H. Davis, and L. B. Lake took active part on the program, and a day of profit was spent. The next convention will be held at Bethany.

DIVIDED.

The Fight in the Republican Camp is Warm.

Jim Southard Wants None But Ashley Republicans.

Interesting News From Republican Headquarters—Bill Albrecht Turned Down.

The monkey-and-parrot seance at republican headquarters goes bravely on.

Manager Southard decides that the whole ticket may go to sheol so long as Ashley is elected.

Last Thursday night there was to be a meeting of a certain clique of republicans at the headquarters on Superior street.

There was also a meeting called for Friday night.

The first was for Ashley and the second was a blind for the general ticket.

Billy Albrecht, the hustling ex-councilmen of the Seventh, got dates mixed and called Thursday instead of Friday evening.

Chairman Southard politely but positively denied the genial Bill admittance to the meeting, saying that this was an Ashley, meeting, and that if he (Bill) came around Friday night he could attend the general meeting.

Bill, it is true, has not been wildly enthusiastic for Ashley, but thought it queer he should be denied admittance to a meeting of a committee of which he is a member.

At Friday night's meeting Mr. Southard let the cat out of the bag.

The committee was discussing the advisability of getting out the full republican vote at Air Line Junction.

One member remarked that the republicans of the Junction were for the most part opposed to Ashley.

"Well," said Chairman Southard, "if they are not for Ashley, I prefer not to have them registered at all."

The statement was received with cries of disapprobation.

Was Mr. Harrison to be sacrificed in Ashley's interests? one inquired.

Is our whole county ticket to be snowed under because Mr. Ashley cannot be elected? asked another.

It was a red-hot meeting, but the fact that an attempt is being made to dump Harrison in order to elect Ashley was roundly denounced.

Let the good fight proceed.

PERRY B. TRUAX DYING.

Not Expected to Live Until Evening.

Mr. Perry B. Truax, of the drug firm of West & Truax, Summit street, is lying at death's door and is not expected to live the day out.

He has been unconscious for 36 hours, and his death is a matter of a very short time. The disease is inflammation of the bladder, and he has been a great sufferer.

Mr. Truax was born in Kingston, Canada, 72 years ago. He came to Toledo before the war, and 40 years ago was agent for the Lake Shore railroad company.

He was connected with the firm of West & Truax for over 30 years, and was essentially a self-made man.

Mr. Truax was highly esteemed, and during his long and varied career in Toledo, gathered around him a large circle of warm personal friends.

Three weeks ago when he first complained of the disease which will probably cause his death, his physician, Dr. Chamberlain, ordered complete rest. The following morning, much to the surprise of his co-workers in the store, he was around at work earlier and brighter than usual.

The next day he complained of being worse. He went home and has never rallied.

M'KINLEY'S VISIT

To Toledo Last Saturday Meant Much.

He Was Here on Biz, and It Is War to the Knife on Foraker and His Friends.

The Bee on Saturday briefly mentioned the fact that Gov. McKinley was in Toledo.

There was something singular in his visit, and in the fact that none of the high moguls of the federal building called upon him.

It was given out by those who met him that he was en route from Peru to Oberlin, but the fact was that the governor came here from Detroit, and was billed for Saginaw Saturday night.

But why he should come to Toledo from Detroit in order to go to Saginaw was somewhat of a mystery.

Then that he should be met by Cols. Corlett, Rike and Bonner while Cols. Brown and Waldorf failed to put in an appearance, was another mystery.

It now transpires that both of these supposed mysteries were bluffs, but they did not go.

It is understood that both Waldorf and Brown had interviews with the governor, and that war to the knife has been declared against Foraker and his friends, not only here, but all over the state.

TOLEDO BRIDGE CO.

To Enlarge the Present Plant Materially.

An Iron Girder Department To Be Added—The Capacity To Be Doubled.

The Toledo Bridge company is doing such a rushing business that it has been found necessary to enlarge the plant to about double its present capacity.

Heretofore the company has had all its heavy castings made by the Carnegie company, but steps are being taken whereby the company can do the greater part of this heavy works itself.

The addition to the building just finished gives more room, but more is still needed, and next spring will see another large addition to the already large plant.

An iron girder department is to be added, and but for the lateness of the season would be completed this year.

The company is at present rushing the plant day and night to its fullest capacity.

The new department will require not only a new building, but some expensive and heavy new machinery.

Orders are away ahead, and the young company has already achieved pronounced success.

FACTS THAT COUNT.

Mr. Taylor Presents Some That Are Indisputable,

And Quotes Reliable Authorities to Prove His Position—An Article Well Worth Reading.

To the Editor: Mr. Maher has repeatedly in a public way reviewed my letter to the Chicago Herald, but each times does not seem to be satisfied with himself as to the results of his efforts. I can't understand why that letter should worry him so much. In the first place I said I was a republican, but opposed to the high tariff policy of the republican party and for that reason would vote for Cleveland and Stevenson. This threw him into all sorts of mental contortions. Why, I cannot understand. There are thousands of republicans of the same mind as myself.

I then stated that American exports of flour last cereal year amounted to the very respectable quantity of one quarter of two hundred and twenty millions of bushels of the raw material. Notwithstanding the fact that I made this statement, Mr. Maher afterward held out the idea that he had to play cunning with me in order to get me to admit that America exported any flour at all. I went so far as to enumerate the many countries to which the American miller could export flour without embarrassment; I also stated that the industry had made progress during the past 25 years.

All of these statements of mine, made in my first letter, Mr. Maher has repeatedly confirmed, but in a way as to make it appear as though I had not only not made the statements myself, but had actually denied them. But while America does export a considerable quantity of flour under existing arrangements it is absurd to stop here, as I said in my first letter, with our vast quantity of raw material left unmanufactured and to be exported as raw material.

I stated that the American milling industry had already outgrown its present market territory and that an extension of trade was impossible because of high tariff and retaliatory high tariff. I pointed to the fact that the import duty upon American flour into France was relatively higher than the import duty on wheat, and that by our high tariff policy and its retaliatory effect, the French buyer can and does put a premium upon the raw material at our very mill doors. This statement has been a great stumbling block to Mr. Maher, and I will try to explain myself. The French buyer can put a premium upon the raw material in so far as the American miller can compete with him in French markets. This does not imply that the French buyer pays the American farmer more for his wheat than does the American miller pay him, nor that the American miller wants the French buyer barred out. I do not ask nor want an unconstitutional export tax on wheat as Mr. Maher would have the farmer think. I am in favor of the freest trade between nations limited only by the necessities of government. I am not opposed to the French buying our farmers' wheat free and unmolested, but with him enjoying that privilege I want our government to pursue a policy that will tend to give me as free an advantage in disposing of my products.

This present administration and Whitelaw Reid as its emissary, might have done something in this direction when they consummated the last commercial treaty between the United States and France, if they had been mindful of the milling interests.

Since I kindly showed Mr. Maher how to get at the weekly Minneapolis production he has been quoting that production and arguing therefrom the profitableness of the business. I stated the magnitude of the production in my first letter, but denied profit therein, due to more production than our present market territory will take. In one place Mr. Maher gave the output for week ending October 14, as 230,000 barrels—the largest on record—correct. He concludes, for the benefit of his readers, that business is good. But a little further down in the same column, I quote from the Northwestern Miller of October 14, "As matters now stand millers fear it will be a long time before confidence enough can be restored to induce very free buying." Still a little further down in the same column it says, "Low grades of good quality can hardly be given away and they are accumulating somewhat."

This same paper of this same date speaks through its New York correspondent as follows: "The inactivity which has prevailed in the flour market for months past has been intensified the past week and probably the total transactions are the smallest noted for many years on this market." The editor's comment on the market for week ending October 21, is about the same as that under date of October 14.

Under date of October 7, about the time I sent my letter to the Herald the editor says, "Despite the quantity of flour being taken, millers generally complain that the market is far from what it should be at this season of the year." I could go on and fill your paper full with such quotations, and yet this is the season of the year when millers count upon their most profitable business.

The above is sufficient to prove my statement correct when I say that there is an overproduction of flour and will be so long as our high protective policy resticts our market territory. Mr. Maher has seen fit to stigmatize me as a college graduate. I wish to say to the readers of the Bee that however much my parents may have neglected me in this respect, yet my arguments in these letters in favor of Cleveland and tariff reform are based upon business experience and practical observation. THOS. A. TAYLOR.

The Kind of Apathy We Want.

Now and then, one hears the remark that an apathetic feeling prevails among the masses. If a splendid registration all over the state, and the probability that more voters will go to the polls than at any previous time in our history are signs of indifference, by all means give us more of them. If the stirring up of republican blood to such a degree that thousands of leaders in the G. O. P. have been impelled to announce that they will support the democratic national ticket is the coming election is a symptom, that is the kind of "apathy" we want. Make no mistake about it; a surprise is in waiting, and it may prove to be even greater than that of 1890.—New York News.

Long and ungainly examples must go from the arithmetic as they have already gone from all reputable school-rooms. "Reduce 550,355,068 inches to acres" is out of date, as is: "What is the cube root of 270,671,777,032,189,896?"—Journal of Education.

The musk deer inhabits the great mountain ranges of central Asia. It is a pretty creature about three feet long and standing two feet high. The head is small, the ears long and erect, and it has an expression almost as melting as an ordinary deer.

WAKE UP.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.

AVENGED AT LAST.

About the year 1800 a series of incomprehensible and curious crimes which entirely baffled the vigilance of the police of Cadiz, in Spain, were committed apparently by the same hand, as all bore exactly similar characteristics, and, stranger than all, each one of the victims was a scion of the same noble family.

The wealthy nobleman, Don Caesar de Lorenz, had just been found lying stiff and dead on the very doorsteps of his mansion. As in all the other cases of this series of murders the only marks to be found on his body were a small puncture underneath the left shoulder blade, from which had oozed a single drop of blood, and a similar one immediately opposite to it on the left breast.

At that time it was considered desecration to in any way mutilate the bodies of the dead nobility. So the scientific investigation, which might have revealed the exact cause of death, was in no case resorted to.

Otto de Lorenz, the next of kin, and the only surviving scion of this noble race, inherited the title and possessions of his dead relative and had ensconced himself in his palatial residence. A suitable time having elapsed, he arranged a supper, to which many of the young nobility of the city, distinguished visitors, actresses and ladies of the "demi monde" were bidden.

Otto had arisen, glass in hand, in response to a toast that one of his guests had just proposed, when the door was thrown open by a servant and "M. le Compte de Mardre" was announced.

The new comer had been for a year or two a well-known and favorite member of the most select circles of the society of Cadiz, and had been on terms of intimacy with the family of Lorenz, consequently his appearance was hailed with pleasure by the young lord of the palace as well as by many of his guests.

"I was about to respond to a toast to my health and to the expressed hope that I should not meet the fate of my unhappy relatives," said Otto.

"It was with grief that I learned through the Journal Parisien of that horror, and in joining you I must at the same time express my sorrow."

The wine was passed again and Otto, hoping that this would end all reference to this unpleasant subject, was chagrined by the count rising and starting a discourse upon it.

"Oh! but it is so terrible, this affair," said he. "Let me recall the facts. The first, if my memory fails me not, was at the time of the grand ball a year ago tonight—the ball given by the head of your house, M. Le Baron, Don Oscar Lorenz, when his beautiful wife, the Donna Inez, was found dead in the bed chamber, whilst her lord, your oldest uncle, was in a stupor wrought by the wine of the hills of your beautiful Castile."

"M. Le Compte, I beg of you to desist," interrupted Otto.

"Pardon me a moment, my dear Otto. This is a subject that aroused my curiosity. What then is the cause of these terrible assassinations? Whose the fierce anger that it seems would annihilate your house?"

"I know not," answered Otto, "neither can I conjure; but let us change the subject. At another time we will speak of it, if you wish."

"Pardon me if I seem importunate, but I ask you to humor me and let me discuss it now. The noble Don Oscar himself was the next one, I believe. He, on returning through the plaza, was seen to sink into a seat. A stranger, whom some said resembled me, nay, some even hinted that it was I, was seen near him at the time.

"None thought anything then, but that he had seated himself to rest awhile before repairing to his home. The next morning he was found there, dead.

"After him came the Little Frederic, his child, also at the time the head, by right of succession, of your house.

"Then there was your second uncle, Don Carlos, he too by right of succession occupying the same position, and then, lastly Don Caesar. Am I not right, Mons. Le Baron?"

"Quite right, count," answered Otto, now with pale face and quivering limbs, "but why continue this discussion? Let it cease, I insist!"

Gradually the company had begun to mistrust the count's motive.

Yet nothing had been said to show that he himself felt any personal interest in the matter, except by what was implied when he in a cynical and sneering manner had said: "Nay, some even hinted that it was I."

"Let me propose this toast," said the count, and then continued: "My friends and ye friends of this house of Lorenz, ye strangers to me and those of ye with whom I have a hundred times shaken the dice or quaffed a merry glass, let us drink to this my toast."

At this he, in all his magnificent stature, his gleaming black eyes electrifying the company, his compact and muscular figure commanding attention, threw himself in the attitude of an orator and said:

"To this let us drink then. Than to him who has done right, may right be done. To him who has never wronged another, may wrong never be done. To him who deserves long life and prosperity, may long life and prosperity come. To him who has against all laws of friendship and honor warred, death."

"And to our noble host, friends, let us all drink his deserts." And he emptied his glass.

The company all responded. Otto himself saying, "Thanks, count, that is indeed a generous toast."

Then the count, in the most pleasant and emotionless manner, that of a friendly and inconsequent guest, said:

"This mystery, my friends, must at some time be cleared up. Let me advance my theory upon it. Let us suppose, that I—yes, I—am the murderer—as has been almost hinted at.

Let us suppose, we will say that this is the story. Bear in mind this is but a theory, from which some of you may advance the true solution. To begin with, we will imagine that, some years ago for instance, our noble host, then a youth of 21 summers, was traveling with me (we will say) in Africa.

"That at some missionary station on the confines of the great desert we were hospitably entertained by an elderly English missionary and his beautiful daughter Ellen.

"That I, a young, rich and hot-blooded Frenchman, fell deeply in love with her, and we were engaged to be married. Absence occurs, and during the time, let me suppose that my traveling companion, separating from me, returned to the missionary station, and by arts known to him and to the lady alone, succeeded in diverting her love from me until at last, under the influence of vile slanders and misrepresented facts, she gave way to him, and became to him that which no honorable French gentleman would make his wife."

Here the count, having gradually become more serious in his talk, suddenly ceased and with a fresh burst as though he had been acting and had returned to his natural smiling demeanor, said:

"Again let us drink to our host. They drank and he continued. Otto meanwhile pale as a ghost hanging his arms over the back of his chair.

"Imagine then, that I, disappointed in my love and in my friendship, deceived by the man who had for years shared my every secret and known the desires of my heart, scourged almost to death by such merciless emotions as God allows his children to suffer, at last conceived the idea of a vengeance the like of which had never been heard of before.

"Imagine that I lifted him from obscurity to the pinnacle of wealth and title and grandeur and at last compassed his death.

"Imagine that for years I suffered under hatred and love, striving by the little of good that might be in me to forego my vengeance, but my overpowering wrongs would not allow that I do it.

"Imagine again that at last my vengeance nearly accomplished, I stand here before you, and that my arch enemy is our noble host."

Eyes blazing, a long dagger in his hand no thicker than a needle, one quick rush across the room, a crash as the window fell out on the terrace, a flying figure, a dead form left behind, a boat skimming down the river with a black-clothed form at the rudder.

The hilt of a gold-headed dagger showing outside Don Otto's coat, upon which were engraved these names: "Inez, Oscar, Frederick, Caesar, Otto."

ABOUT HUMMING BIRDS.

Where the Beauties Most Abound and the Manner of Their Capture.

Although the commercial demand for humming birds has been the cause of their wholesale destruction, it has enabled naturalists to become better acquainted with them, the vast number of specimens contained in milliners' and taxidermists' stocks frequently yielding species which otherwise would have been likely to remain unknown to science. As to the methods by which collectors secure them, many absurd notions are current. It is said that they are shot with water or with sand. As a matter of fact, shot of the numbers 10 and 11 are employed. But by far the most effective weapon is the reed blow-pipe which the South American Indians use with perfect certainty of aim, little balls of clay being projected by the breath. In Brazil very fine nets are utilized to capture the birds, and sometimes they are taken by means of bird-lime, which is apt to damage the plumage, says a correspondent in the Boston Transcript.

Owing to the reckless slaughter of these little victims for ornamental purposes, certain species are already on the verge of extinction. This does not seem surprising when one learns that 3,000 skins of the ruby and topaz humming bird alone were shipped not long ago from a Brazilian port in a single consignment while at a public sale of bird skins, held in London, March 21, 1888, more than 12,000 humming bird skins were disposed of. And in one week during the same year, there were sold at auction in London 400,000 humming birds and other birds from North and South America.

The humming birds constitute the most remarkable feature of the bird life of the new world. They have no representatives in any other part of the earth. About 500 distinct species are now known, while others are being brought to light with almost every fresh collection made in Mexico, Central America or the higher lands of South America.

They are most numerous in mountainous countries, their center of abundance being among the northern Andes, between the parallels of 10 degrees north and south of the equator. The great focus of this great feathered family is in Ecuador, where more than 100 species are found, over half of them being peculiar to that country. Columbia has about 100 species, and Peru and Bolivia together have 96 known species. In the United States only 17 species exist, the valley of the Mississippi and all the states east of that river possessing geographical distribution of humming birds is very interesting, some species having a widely extended range, while others are confined to single mountain peaks or valleys. One group of them frequents the darkest and most retired parts of the forests of Brazil, from which fact they have come to be known as the Hermits.

WE ARE ALWAYS DYING.

Changes in Human Economy Begins With Life and Ends With Death.

Life, indeed, consists in a series of changes of tissue, and the human economy is simply as far as its material part is concerned, a machine, and primarily depends on food as the most important factor in keeping it in order. When it is said that we commence to die as soon as we are born, it of course means that certain parts of the body immediately begin to perish; their existence is ephemeral, they come and go, are replenished and decay, says the Gentleman's Magazine.

They are the dying parts of that system of life, which may last a little while, but which must eventually yield to the inexorable law of nature. The nails, the hair, etc., are observable as an instance of this decay. The same rule applies to every other organ and tissue of the body, though it is not palpable to the naked eye. The skin is always peeling. The food that is taken in the one hour nourishes the system and ejects that which was taken the hour before.

Perfect health and condition, at whatever time of life we may apply the term, from infancy to old age, depends upon the proper assimilation of the food taken, and its natural elimination when it is done with, by the different organs that have to deal with it.

Of course, heredity and a few other circumstances must also be taken into consideration in estimating the chances of life. If the exact amount of food necessary to nourish each tissue of the body were taken daily, having regard to work and other circumstances, and if the economy were kept properly employed, it would mean that the individual would be in the most perfect health and condition, and ought to live to the age of a hundred years or more. But how seldom does this occur.

From some cause or other more is taken than is necessary to supply constitutional requirements, and the result is that the surplus remains stored, and in some way or other acts prejudicially. If it does not cause absolute illness, it impedes vigor and elasticity and leads to a feeling of malaise and disinclination for work, making one's ordinary occupation a burden.

We are tempted to eat when we are not hungry and drink when we are not thirsty, and if we do we must pay the penalty. More than this, in this life at all events the sins of the fathers are visited on the children, and the old port drunk by the grandfather, yields a crop of gout in the grandson. Stimulant taken to excess in the father transmits the curse to the progeny, and they stars in the struggle of life handicapped from the first hour, and like a race horse with no stamina, fall early in the race.

A CAT THAT GIVES TIPS.

And the Sports That Have Played Them Are Ahead of the Game.

One of the most important attaches of the "White Elephant" pool room is "Roots," "Butch" Thompson's pet kitten. "Roots is a little wizen-faced kitten about six months old. Who owns it or where it comes from nobody attached to the pool room knows, but about two weeks ago it walked quietly into the room, and standing under the blackboard cried to be lifted up. Somebody lifted it upon the platform and it walked under "Clem's" private chair and established itself there, and there it is to be seen every day. During the day while business is going on it remains at its post, but as soon as the last race of the day is decided it is lifted down and walks sedately out of the room.

"Butch" is quick to notice the presence of any stranger in the room, and he noticed the kitten the first day it took possession of its new quarters. Looking at it for a few minutes, "Butch" said: "If the favorite wins the race, out you go." But the favorite did not win, and "Roots" has held his ground ever since.

Last Friday it was noticed that "Roots" was not in his accustomed place, and it was also noticed that the favorite had won every race. Just before the last race of the day "Roots" walked quietly into the room, and as he was lifted upon the platform "Butch" raised the price of the favorite in the last race from 4 to 5 to even money, and sure enough the favorite lost.

The strangest thing about "Roots" is his judgment on horses, but it is but rarely that he can be induced to express an opinion about the merits of a horse. Some days ago Rosa H. was entered in a race at Gravesend, and her name appeared near the bottom of the blackboard presided over by "Clem." While the commissions were being handed in on the race "Roots" quietly arose from his comfortable position under the chair and walked along the platform until he was directly under the entries in the Rosa H. race. Then he stood upon his hind feet and deliberately placed his front paws on the name Rosa H., stood thus for a moment and then walked back to his resting place. All the superstitious players in the room went up and played Rosa H., and, in the parlance of the turf, "got all the money." Every morning as soon as "Butch" Thompson arrives he sends out for a pint of milk, and "Roots" is furnished with breakfast and supper.—New York Herald.

A DISH

That Is Fit for the Gods—Cooked Alligator Eggs.

"Never ate any alligator eggs, I guess?" was the somewhat curious question asked by Julian Gonzales of San Augustine, Fla., as he picked his teeth in the hotel corridor. "Well, you needn't smile and look dubious," he admonished the incredulous listener. "I have, and I can assure you that when properly prepared there is no dish known to the culinary art more palatable. The natives of the Florida swamps and lagoons fairly feast upon them in season, and if Lucullus were with us in the flesh and could get a whiff of the aroma as it comes from the steaming, sputtering gravy in which they are served, he would turn green with envy. There is no hardened shell on the egg to speak of, you know, and after it is washed it is soused into a pot of boiling water.

"Only two minutes are required to harden it sufficiently to impart to it a safe consistency. Then it is put into a peculiar brown gravy, whose chief condiment is beans of red pepper, or chile, as the Spaniards call it. In this gravy it bakes until its thin outer coating wrinkles and splits open, revealing the luscious meat in a solid, elliptical lump. The gravy permeates the meat through the openings in the shell, and then you have a mouthful fit for the gods. The cooking is complete then, and no other flavoring is necessary. I have eaten a dozen of these eggs at a single meal, and then hungered for more. It is a fact that the natives relish them so that, badly as they need the coin of the realm, money cannot buy their alligator eggs. For this reason, and this alone, their delights are unknown to the epicurean world. It differs mainly from the hen's egg in its decidedly saline taste."

PECULIAR WOUNDS.

Various Injuries for Which Veterans Draw a Pension.

There were some veterans with queer records in attendance at the recent encampment. One of these, known familiarly as Comrade Chase, who served in a Maine battery during the war, carries the scars of 48 wounds received in a single battle, that of Gettysburg. His numerous wounds resulted from the explosion of a spherical case immediately in front of him at that memorable battle. Corporal John Burns, of Ohio, receives a pension for a peculiar wound, which is described in the pension bureau as "a shot in the hip with a barrel of sugar." Burns, says the Washington Post, was on guard duty at a sharp railroad curve in Virginia during the latter part of the war, and was struck in the hip and disabled by a barrel of sugar, which was thrown suddenly from the rickety car by the momentum at the turn in the road. Another veteran who was present is recorded in the bureau as having stopped a cannon ball with his abdomen. He was sitting in a tent near headquarters when a spent cannon ball came bounding along and struck him in the stomach with sufficient force to knock him hors de combat, but not to kill him.

Still another queer case is that of a Pennsylvania veteran. He was rendered totally deaf by a cannon ball, which whizzed by his head in uncomfortably close proximity at the battle of Malvern Hill. In describing the sensation afterward he said it felt for an instant as if 50 cyclones had burst loose about his head. The concussion also paralyzed him for several minutes. There is another pensioner who receives a monthly allowance from Uncle Sam's till for a "horse bite of the neck." He was a cavalryman, and claims to have been bitten by a vicious animal while serving with Sheridan in his valley ride. The bite resulted in partial paralysis of the spine. These are but a few illustrations of the multitudinous peculiarities of war which were represented at the great Grand Army encampment.

SOME FOREIGN BATHS.

How the French Hotels Provide That Fashionable Luxury for Their Guests —The Baths in Switzerland.

They had told us they would be as difficult to find as oases in the desert, and with as little water in them. That only the larger hotels of great cities possessed them, almost none of the small apartments, and that the country inns, in no possible way, could make provisions for them. Furthermore they told us that the only way in which that deep-seated American instinct for its morning and evening plunge could be indulged would be by carrying some rubber arrangement in our trunks or imitating the custom of our English neighbors in theirs. But for once we turned a deaf ear. And how much of romance and poetry we had missed, had we not?

First there were those tubs on the steamer. "Tubs on the steamer," where everybody bathes.

The solid piece of white marble fashioned into a deep, commodious bath, and filled with clear, cold and shining water just dipped from the sea, seems somehow never to have known another plunge before your own.

Then your bath in Paris. What modern convenience could ever compensate for the delight of this? You ring your bell in the morning. The garcon is called. You hear a stir in the corridor. Then there is pushed into your room something on castors—a great copper tub, deep and long as the biggest of your bath tubs at home. Over this and pushed down well in all the curves and covers is a great white, spotless linen sheet, and over this the water is poured. You take your bath, therefore, shielded from all contact with the copper by this freshly laundried piece of linen.

But the preparations made for you, do you think they end here, and with the water and the sheet? Never were you more mistaken, for your towels, those towels that are just always on pegs just out of reach, or at best, are folded on the back of some chair drawn up beside you, those towels are here on this morning—in Paris—brought to you in a way to make you weep for all the waste of your past experience, for all the dearth of what the future out of Paris will forever mean.

The garcon brings it in his hands, a round copper vessel, so highly polished that the furniture of your room as he moves appears in reflected contortions on it. Inside this vessel is another, tightly sealed and holding hot water. About this inner vessel there are packed your linen bathrobe, and inside the half-dozen towels sent you. How warm and even caressing they are as you step out into the possible chill of your room.

But there are others baths in Switzerland as good as these, though in a different way. There are the baths which you must go out to find, to which you must be directed round certain turnings of the street or along vine-covered pathways in the woods.

At Giesbach, where the seven cataracts, one in mad rush after the other, from high up the mountain side fall trembling and bubbling in the lake, you walk under an arbor and over a graveled path till a small house is reached. There in an outer chamber, presided over by a wrinkled, kindly crone, you have a bath Diana herself must have dipped in before she followed the gods away from earth. It lies four or five feet below the floor. The mountain torrents feed it. The whitest and purest of marbles frame it. The queerest, most royal of ferns decorate its borders. Never was water more sparkling, nor clearer, nor colder.

At Lucerne you may bathe in the lake, but bathing there is a quiet proceeding, a dip behind wooden railings and a wooden floor beneath you, no exhibition, no glow. At Geneva your wooden railings protect you from the tumult by waters of the lake just there where they push to gain freedom in the tumultuous tremblings of the River Rhone. But it is at Thun Thun, that fair old city of Switzerland, with its ancient towers and crooked streets, there one gets the best of all the river baths I know. Wooden railings again protect you, but what of that? The water tumbles just as wildly through them. The wide, open sky is over your head, the grating pebbles of the river under your feet. The trees of the shore look down at you, those trees that shade the path along which you have come to reach the very spot. You have looked, in walking on it, beyond, at the snowclad peak of the Jungfrau resplendent in the distance, at the steep mountain sides that border the lake, you have been fanned by the sweet breezes and lured by lonely sounds.

And your modern conveniences that sympathizing friends have sighed for, that you have expected to miss every day, what in any modern convenience could have yielded you such delights as these?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The most artistic as well as the most refined style that has appeared in silver is seen this fall in the plain surfaces and broken raised edges. The contrast of surfaces and the small proportion of ornament thrown into such fine relief by the plain lustrous ground is attracting admiration on every side.

The Columbian Concert, the Elliott Family, Big Eliza and the Emerson Concert Company Here This Week.

Theater-goers will be pleased to learn that Hoyt's A Temperance Town will appear at Wheeler's to-morrow and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday afternoon. The piece made quite a hit when produced here the first time, and now it is even better. A Real Rainstorm.

Bartley Campbell's romantic play, in seven acts and six tableaux, will be the attraction at the People's theater all this week. The regular matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday will be given. The White Slave, which is under the personal direction of Mr. H. C. Kennedy, is one of the strongest plays of its class and has always played to banner business. This season the play is more handsomely mounted and costumed than ever before, and the cast is pronounced superior to any of the previous ones. The scenic will also be elaborate, including a real rainstorm.

This Evening's Concert.

The Columbian concert at Memorial hall this evening promises to be a treat. The program will be rendered under the direction of J. B. Poulin, and the following artists will appear: Miss Wheeler, Miss Clouse, Mr. Seubert, Mrs. Ainsworth, Rudolph Brand, Mr. Poulin, and Messrs. Bourdette and Creasey.

At the Wonderland.

Big Eliza, the monster woman, arrived in Toledo this morning in a baggage car. She can not travel in an ordinary coach, as she won't go through the door and no seat would hold her. She will pose at the Wonderland all week.

The other attractions will be C. A. Bonney, the musical Albino; G. H. Schoof with his South African exhibit; a miniature oil field in full operation. In the theater, the Elliott voyagers, including the famous Elliott family and a large company, will give a first-class performance.

The Columbian Concert.

Monday evening a Columbian concert will be given at Memorial hall, under the direction of J. B. Poulin. The soloists will be: Mrs. W. W. Ainsworth, soprano; Miss Zoe Wheeler, soprano; Miss Rose Clouse, piano; Mr. R. Brand, violin; Mr. J. B. Poulin, tenor; Mr. Fred Seubert, baritone. Math'as' orchestra and a chorus of 75 voices will also participate. The program will conclude with Goumod's Trasse Solenelle.

BIRMINGHAM CHAPEL.

East Toledo Congregational Mission Building.

Dedication Services Yesterday Afternoon With Joyful Praises and Solemn Prayers for the Divine Blessing.

Birmingham chapel, a neat and appropriate building erected in East Toledo, through the efforts of Rev. W. W. Williams, D. D., and the people of the First Congregational church, with the assistance of Christian people generally, was dedicated as a house of Divine worship yesterday afternoon. It is built on a lot purchased for the purpose, and fronts on Paine avenue, opposite the malleable iron works, and takes its name from Birmingham addition.

There were about 300 people present at the dedication, and to these were distributed programs, upon which, over the order of exercises, was a picture of Dr. Williams and the following lines:

"Gratefully acknowledging that the assistance of Rev. Dr. Williams has alone made it possible for us to arise and build at this time, we gladly associate his portrait with this happy occasion. May the abundant blessing of God be upon him and all those whom he has enlisted to co-operate with us in the behalf of the cause of God in this locality."

The services began with the organ and Doxology, the congregation standing, and so remaining during the chanting of the Lord's prayer by the choir. Between the reading of highly appropriate scripture lessons the choir and congregation sang the hymn, "Beautiful Zion, Built Above."

The prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. O. W. Fisher, pastor of Washington Street Congregational church; then Miss Jennie Harris sang a sweet and expressive solo, and the offertory was taken.

The dedication sermon was preached by Dr. Williams from the text: 'I was glad when they said unto me, 'Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet are standing in thy gates, O. Jerusalem.'"

The discourse was a blending of thanks to God for having put it into the hearts of men and women to prosecute the work of building the chapel, and of counsel that it may be ever and gladly devoted by the people to the service of the Most High.

After the singing of the hymn "Work, for the Night Is Coming," by the whole congregation, remarks were made by Revs. S. L. Roberts, Third Street Methodist church; Emory W. Hunt, Ashland Avenue Baptist church; W. C. Hopkins, Grace (Episcopal) church; J. A. P. McGaw, First Presbyterian church; J. E. Hiller, German Methodist church, and B. C. Black, Disciples of Christ; then the services were closed with the hymn, "Shall We Gather at the River?" and the benediction.

The work at Birmingham mission was started the first Sunday in June, 1891, when Rev. O. D. Fisher conducted preaching service at the residence of Mr. Geo. H. Booth. Preaching service was held in the open air at Mr. Booth's home for three months, when the room at the corner of Front street and Paine avenue was rented. The Christian Endeavor society was organized July 31, 1891, with a membership of great active and three associate members. Prayer meetings were held at private residences until the room was rented, since which time they have been held there. The C. E. society has charge of this work. The Sunday school was organized March 20, 1892, and has been well attended considering the facilities for accommodating the scholars.

Early in the beginning of the work a building subscription was started. The local subscription at the present time amounts to $683. Until some church organization undertook this work it seemed impossible to go forward with the building project. After the assurance given by the First Congregational church, of Toledo, that they would assist in the work, plans were prepared and a lot secured. Work on the building was commenced August 27. The lot cost $400 and the building will cost about $1,250, which does not include furnishing. The subscription raised by Rev. Dr. Williams in the First Congregational church is $1,422.72. The Ladies' Working band of the same church propose to carpet the chapel at an expense of about $120.

The building committee consisted of N. Lewis, F. Valentine, George H. Booth and Misses Annie Booth and Lillie Valentine, and F. Hubbard, D. N. Trowbridge, J. G. Mitchell and S. C. Schenck constitute a board of trustees, holding the legal ownership of the property till the formation of a church organization to which it can be conveyed.

The officers of the Birmingham Sunday school are: George H. Booth, superintendent, F. Valentine, assistant superintendent; Mrs. F. J. Bort, secretary; Miss Lillie Valentine, treasurer; Mrs. N. S. Lewis, superintendent primary department.

The following minute was unanimously adopted at the prayer meeting of October 25: "We hereby extend to Rev. Dr. Williams and the other donors of the First Congregational church our most earnest and sincere thanks for their generous and prompt response to our needs in supplying money and furnishings for our new chapel."

A QUEER PARADISE.

Away Up in the Lofoden Islands Is a Norwegian Resort of Beauty.

Would it surprise you to hear that the Lofoden islands, off Norway, are on their south side a terrestrial paradise? The gulf stream warms them all the year round, and the consumptives of the world enrich them by taking their cod liver oil. The cod liver oil boss is Peter Muller, who, I was told, employs 70,000 people in fisheries, factories, bottling, packing, and so on. His daughters were the greatest catches in the Scandinavian marriage market. They married according to tastes, and happily. One of them chose from her many suitors a captain of the Norwegian navy, who left it on his marriage and became a distinguished marine painter.

There are pastoral Edens on the ledges of the Lofoden mountains. I never saw more grace in combination with the sort of craggy severity that one meets with on the west coast of Scotland, with this difference, however, that the Hebrides are as though painted in Indian ink, whereas the coloring in summer in the Lofoden scenery is indescribably splendid. I shall not easily forget how all new to it were lifted out of themselves by the sail through Raft Sund.—London Truth.

TRUTH IN VERSE.

(Tune: Old Rosin the Bow.)

Just think of the Chicago Convention
Ye Harrison fellows, so blue,
And hear a few things that I'll mention
Concerning our Grover the true;
Concerning our Grover the true.

He served us four years, you remember,
And gave us prosperity, too;
All good men shall stand in November
And vote for our Grover the true;
And vote for our Grover the true.

And during the four years I mention
He stood by the brave boys in blue,
And gave all true soldiers a pension,
'Twas Grover the honest and true.
'Twas Grover the honest and true.

Long years of high tariff, think over,
What profits have they brought to you,
Compared with the four years of Grover?
Then vote for our Cleveland the true;
Then vote for our Cleveland the true.

Now, voters, all stand at your station,
And show just what you can do;
To wipe out distress from our nation,
We'll vote, then, for Grover the true;
We'll vote, then, for Grover the true.

He favors reform and protection,
Only tariff for just revenue;
Be just to yourselves at election,
And vote for our Grover the true;
And vote for our Grover the true.

Fling our flag to the breeze, marching steady,
With Cleveland to dare and to do;
Hurrah! next November be ready
To vote for our Grover the true;
To vote for our Grover the true

HALLOWEE'N PARTIES.

How to Read Your Fate in Mystical Ways.

The Apple Test—Soap Bubbles, Three Bowls of Water, Naming the Apple Seeds.

Have you a lover? But of course you have, if you are a woman, and young, and if so sad a case abides that you have none, why, then, you want one.

"He cometh not" is father to "I'll make him come." And so it is that lassies—and lads as well—seize on all mystic aids to help their cause. In all countries there is a tradition that on one particular night of the year ghosts walk—not the theatrical ghost, that is another story, though in some companies he doesn't walk much oftener. The German Walpurgis night, when witches and evil spirits assemble on the summit in the Hallowe'en of Great Britain. Whether it came from the eve of All Saints, the conversion of the Pantheon into a place of Christian worship, or is a relic of Paganism, matters little to the girls and boys; but certain it is in all English speaking countries the night of the 31st of October is a time for the powers of the air and disembodied souls to concern themselves with the affairs of men, and spirits are abroad upon the earth.

Nuts play an important part in games and spells, so much so that in the North of England it is called "Nutcracker Night." One way of determining your future, which could easily be managed in any room where there is an open fire, or might be arranged with a little brazier of coals, is to name three nuts, two to be the name of lovers and one your own name. Place these on a bar of the grate, or over your brazier. If a nut cracks or jumps your lover is unfaithful; if it blazes or burns, he has regard for you, but if the one you name for yourself blazes and burns with the other one, you will surely be married to the one for which it is named.

Apples, which have played such important parts in the love affairs of the world, not to mention the Eden affair, or the episode which brought about the Trojan war, are naturally very important factors in deciding heart matters on Hallowe'en. Ducking for apples in a tub of water has fallen somewhat into disrepute since bangs came into fashion, and water works ruin to the modern fashionable head.

Another game which might have its drawbacks for good clothes, but which the young people could indulge in if they covered themselves with aprons, is to suspend from the ceiling or gas chandelier a stick which will balance horizontally, having upon one end an apple and upon the other a lighted candle. Some one sets the stick twirling rapidly, and the one who wishes to try his fate attempts to catch the apple in his mouth. If he secures the fruit his love affair will prosper; if he gets grease upon his face from the candle they will quarrel and part; if he is scorched by the flame the direst consequences will follow. As he is most likely to get smeared with grease, there is considerable merriment in watching the faces of the victims.

The old custom of naming the apple seeds is too well known to need description; but it never fails to produce its share of innocent merriment, and on this night, when a peculiar significance seems to attach to all omens, all harmless fooling goes with a zest.

Another use for the apple is to go into a dimly lighted room alone, and eat one standing before the mirror. Before you have finished you will see over your shoulder the face of your fate, or else you are not to have one. This wierd performance is one not to be recommended, as some nervous, imaginative people have suffered unpleasant and even lasting results from such things.

If you are going to have a little dance, a pretty novelty would be to have twin favors of various kinds, which the ladies and gentlemen may draw from a pile, each in a separate room, or in the dressing rooms before descending to the drawing rooms. Another way would be to have a blindfolded gentleman led by one of the ladies distribute the favors to all the guests.

Only two of a kind of these favors must be provided. They may be buttonhole bouquets all alike, as a single pink rose or carnation—and this would give a very pretty effect to the room—but to each is attached either a fancy little pin, which may be had for 5 cents, a small gilt star or heart, or a bit of ribbon which has only one duplicate. You may use simply tiny knots of ribbon if you iwsh, or any pretty favor that suggests itself. Should you desire a grotesque effect and a good deal of fun, you may provide odd paper caps, which each guest is obliged to wear during, say, the third dance, which may be called the cap quadrille. As soon as a gentleman gets his cap or other favor he must go in search of the lady who has the duplicate. When she is found, she must be his partner in the first dance, and he must escort her to supper.

To keep up the mystic flavor of the night you may have present an astrologer, or one who has provided himself with a book on the ancient art, and is expert enough to quickly give a few facts on the horoscope of an individual by being given the month and day of birth.

Soap bubbles are a pretty amusement for young people. If a bubble rises to the ceiling an diasts while you count twenty your lover is true to you. If you blow two, both lasting as long as this and both breaking at the same time, you will have a happy married life. If your bubble breaks immediately upon detaching itself from the pipe your love is unfaithful.

The old trick with the three bowls of water is easily done. One bowl contains clean water, one muddy and one none at all. The clean means a bachelor or maid, the muddy a widower or widow and the empty one that you are not to be married at all. You are led up blindfolded to dip your finger in the fateful bowl. Burns tells of an old bachelor who was so incensed at twice getting the empty one, and so being doubly assured of a continuance of his single misery, that he caught up the innocent crockery and wrathfully slammed it into the fire.—Alice E. Ives in New York Recorder.

ALL-HALLOWEEN.

As the years roll by in their sordid grind,
And the seasons come and go
With their life and death, and joy and pain,
And merriment, work and woe,
Like mile-stones white on a tiresome road,
These dear old Saint Days stand,
And point with their fingers of helpfulness
To a fairer and better land.

And the sweetest of these is Halloween,
When the saints come back to earth,
And walk in our midst and give us cheer,
And the children are full of mirth;
And the ruddy fires of home and peace
Burn bright at the ingleside;
And the goodly harvests of fruit and grain
Are garnered far and wide.
And the sun's long rays to the cold earth lean—
Yes, the sweetest of these is Halloween.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Enlightenment on the Park Question.

To the Editor: A petition is being gotten up, it is said, to have the park commissioners cut off the back end of all the lots fronting on Maiden Lane, drawing a straight line from the Whitaker stable, which would cut off Mrs. Fray's houses on Madison street. Now, a much better plan would be to take all the block, or more. As time will remedy the evil of the unsightly stables, the back ends of the lots would not be much of an improvement. Again, at no very distant time, the end of Memorial plot could have a lawn, or some public buildings on it, which needed light all around it. This would obscure all that was unsightly. What land there is, is too expensive for the city to buy at present. The dwellers on Madison street do not need open spaces as much as the poor near Cherry street. At the back of the court house, land is far cheaper, and as we have said, these parks ought to be located where that class of our citizens live who have small lots and homes that are not as cool as the homes of those who have more open spaces, where they can sit evenings in summer.

Who would want to sit in a small open place on the point of land called Memorial park, with no distance or shelter from close-by gazers? There would be some sense in it if the whole block was taken; even then the handsomer park could be made by extending the court house grounds and leaving the point in question to be occupied by some necessary public building, which would be both a convenience and beautifier. Our municipality has committed errors enough in letting the old canal bed pass out of its hands. With a double row of trees on either side and a good pavement, we could have had a seven to nine mile drive, beautifully shaded, that would have acted as a fire belt also.

One who thinks common sense is the best sense in the world, and would not spend the taxpayers' money for high-priced land, when cheaper would serve the purposes better; also contribute more to the comfort of those who have no large grounds to sit or walk in of their own.

Toledo, Oct. 31. F.

Mr. Maher Replies Muchly.

To the Editor: I feel as if I had more than my share of honors in last Saturday's Bee, both in editorial notices and from correspondents. I have no intention of making war upon converts. I think Gov. Hill rather hard on them; they serve a purpose in politics. In their zeal to show the thoroughness of their conversion they are usually ready to do the dirty work of slandering their former associates.

As to Deacon Taylor's little sore, he should conceal it from the public.

To the man on Ashland avenue, who sees a little advertising, I must send disappointment. I have no doubt but his article is a very good one—in his own opinion. It reads to me like a bad case of delirium tremens.

Mr. Burns' article does him credit in what is said and the way he says it, but he uses his space to show why all Irishmen should be democrats, whereas my article, which he was answering, was aimed at the cowardliness of Irishmen applauding Mac Veagh in his contemptible slanders upon a brother Irishman, who had been so helpful in the cause of his home land as Patrick Egan was.

That he was a republican was no reason why respectable Irishmen should applaud slander upon his good name.

It was evident that Gov. Hill did not agree with Mr. Burns, and did agree with me, when he turned on the nasty Mac-Veagh and wiped the floor with him. More power to his tongue!

It is also evident that the leaders in New York have discovered that Mac-Veagh's attack upon Egan was bad politics, and that decent Irishmen of both parties would resent it, as the following extract from the New York Sun of Saturday, will prove:

The democrats say that Wayne MacVeagh by his attacks on Patrick Egan has done ever so much harm. The reports from the interior of the state say that Irishmen who had been swung in line for Cleveland are kicked over the traces after reading Mr. MacVeagh's attacks on Egan and have switched over to the republicans.

Most of the democratic orators just in from stumping tours through the state, admitted that they had observed this feature.

So when Mr. Burns assures me so positively what Irishmen will do with their ears, he permits his hopes to govern his thoughts, and in this case he appears to be doomed to disappointment. I think I have observed that the individual Irishman is the sole owner of himself, and that he frequently disappoints the man who thinks he owns him.

THE MODERN BED.

There are nowadays cleanly springs and hair mattresses piled high in the place of the old feather beds; and as to stiff white bed covers, pillow slips and shams, false sheets and Valenciennes trimmings, monogramed and ruffled fineries, there is a truce. They were so slippery, so troublesome and so false withal, that the beds that have known them shall know them no more forever. They had always to be unpinned and unhooked before the sleeper could enter his bed, and they were the torment of the housemaid. They entailed a degree of washing and ironing that was endless, and yet many a young housekeeper thought them indispensable. That idea has gone out completely. The bed is now made up with its fresh linen sheets, its clean blankets and its Marseilles quilt, with square or long pillows, as the sleeper fancies, with bolster in plain linen sheath. Then, over the whole is thrown a light lace cover lined with liberty silk. This may be as expensive or as cheap as the owner wishes. Spreads of satin may be used covered with Chinese embroidery, or with patchwork designs. One light and easily aired drapery succeeds the four or five pieces of unmanageable linen. If the bed is a tester, and the curtains if silk or chintz, the bed covering should match in tint, and in a very pretty bed room the walls should be covered with chintz or silk.—Decorator and Furnisher.

WHITTIER AND HIS FRIENDS.

Notable revelations of the heart of Whittier, and not to be forgotten in any survey of his poems of New England, are the poems addressed by him to New England men, his friends, writes Edwin D. Mead in the November Editor's Table of the New England Magazine. Many of these are devoted to his anti-slavery friends—the lines to Garrison, to Channing, to Rantoul, to Sumner, to the Sewalls, to Lydia Maria Child. The poem on William Francis Bartlett is a beautiful tribute to that youthful hero. The lines addressed to Bayard Taylor and to James T. Fields bring to remembrance the bright portraits of those two dear friends of the poet, in "The Tent on the Beach." "Among the Hills" is gracefully dedicated to Mrs. Fields. "The Prayer of Agassiz" preserves the memory of the reverent opening of the famous school at Penikese. "Ichabod," the bitter word with which the poet denounced and mourned for Webster after his terrible mistake in 1850, is a poem equalled in severity only by Browning's "The Lost Leader." In truth the poet himself came to feel, as passion subsided, that it was too severe; and "The Lost Occasion" is in a measure an atonement for it. The verses to "Bryant on his Birthday" close with lines which would equally, in that war time, have fitted Whittier himself:

"Thank God! his hand on Nature's keys
Its cunning keeps at life's full span;
But dimmed and dwarfed, in times like these,
The poet seems beside the man!

So be it! let the garlands die.
The singer's wreath, the painter's meed,
Let our names perish, if thereby
Our country may be saved and freed!"

THE SCHOOL IMBROGLIO.

Superintendent Compton Waiting Advice of His Lawyers.

Superintendent Compton and School Commissioner Scott have locked horns and Mr. Compton proposes seeing who is in the right.

Said Superintendent Compton to a Bee this morning in answer to the question, "Will you take action against Dr. Scott in this educational trouble?"

"I am now waiting for the opinion of two attorneys in the matter, and if it is an indictable offense, or if he can be impeached by law, I will take action.

"If the law and courts decide that it is a criminal offense to solicit a board of examiners to grade teachers below what they deserve, it will be worth while to take action.

"There is not a statement that I have made and that he has denied but what I can prove with witnesses. I did not have a hole in the floor, like the case of the boodlers, but I had witnesses, nevertheless. I mean now to give the thing a complete airing—follow it up in detail, and let all facts be known, and when the time comes I will be ready with an affidavit of the absolute truth of the charges preferred against him.

"If we cannot sustain the discipline of our schools we had better lock the doors. I have been working for the interest of the public schools for seven years, and this is the first time I have ever had any trouble with a member of the board; for it is the first time that I have ever been asked to do anything cowardly or mean.

"In regard to the 'tender-hearted mercies of the man,' I can say that we have sent 40 or 50 boys to Lancaster, and these have been the worst—we cannot allow the boys with corrupt tendencies to be on the streets to become armies of criminals," and here Superintendent Compton took from his desk several knives, slingshots, etc., with which some of the scholars had either injured other pupils, teachers or persons who had happened to pass the school during the boy's unwieldy moment, as an example of a few of the offenses committed. He also stated that he had revolvers which the boys had carried, "and yet," said he, "a few people with morbid sensibilities and erratic views, make a sympathetic howl when a small rawhide is used as a means of punishment in deserving cases. I will merely say that proceedings in the matter will probably grow interesting the first of the week."

A BIG DAMAGE SUIT.

Is What the T., A. A. & N. M. R. R. Co. Has Prospect of.

S. J. King, a Toledo Traveling Man, Is Arrested at Owosso Under Peculiar Circumstances.

It is more than probable that the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan Railroad company will be involved in a heavy damage suit.

It will grow out of circumstances which occurred at Owosso, Mich., a station on the Ann Arbor road, something in this manner:

S. J. King, traveling salesman for R. H. Lane & Co., wholesale shoemen, on October 17, took out a T., A. A. & N. M. mileage book, at Sam T. Fisk's cut rate office, on Madison street, but paid nothing for it, for reasons which will be stated later on.

There were 500 miles in the book and he used all but about 200. On Friday of last week, Mr. King states that he boarded an Ann Arbor passenger train at Ithaca, Mich., to come to Toledo, and presented the book to have his fare taken up.

The conductor looked at the number of the book and stated that he had orders to take the book up when presented. Mr. Karg interposed no objection and paid his fare to Owosso, the end of that conductor's run.

Mr. Karg states that when he arrived at Owosso he purchased a ticket to Toledo and got aboard the train. Before the train started he claimed that Superintendent J. B. Connors entered the car and, approaching, said that he (Karg) should consider himself under arrest.

Mr. Karg inquired upon what charge, to which Mr. Connors replied, "for having stolen property in his possession.

Mr. Karg wanted to know to what property he referred, and was told that the mileage book taken by the conductor had been stolen from the office of the Owosso Times. Mr. Karg said he could account for his possession of the book, but was informed by Connors that he could do that in court. Mr. Karg wanted to know if they had a warrant for his arrest and was told that they had not, and Kark told them he would not go. Mr. Karg states that the conductor and Connors grabbed him and began pulling him towards the door; that he made a strong resistance, but was overpowered and literally dragged through the streets of Owosso to the mayor's office.

On arriving before that officer, the case was stated and Mr. Karg released, the mayor holding that he could not be tried until complaint had been filed against him.

The train had gone, and Mr. Karg went to a hotel, where he was shortly afterwards arrested on a warrant charging him with being in possession of stolen property, and again hauled before the mayor. He gave bail for his appearance, and came to Toledo.

The case has been set for hearing next Tuesday morning.

It seems that during the month the office of the Owosso Times had been robbed and a number of mileage books stolen.

On the morning of October 12, Sam. T. Fisk, the ticket broker, received the following letter:

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 11, '92.

Sam. T. Fisk, Toledo, O.:

Dear Sir: Among my mileage books that I wish to dispose of is a 500-mile T., A. A. & N. M., and as Mr. Lepper, of Detroit, could not use it he referred me to you. I enclose the book, knowing that the association always does the fair thing. Having sold my business I do this, and am going to Grand Rapids, Mich. It is not signed, as you will see. Hoping you may be able to use this, I remain

Yours, etc.,

J. W. KLOCH.

P. S.—In remitting, send postal notes or express order, as I am going to a strange place. Address to Ovid, Mich.

The signature differs greatly from the writing of the letter, but is said to be a fac simile of the signature on the ticket and with treat of the owner of the book. Being suspicious that all was not straight, Mr. Fisk answered that he would buy the book, but would take it on sale at the owner's risk.. No reply was received and in due time the book was given out to Mr. Karg, with the understanding that if he could use it all right, if not all right.

Mr. Kark has consulted with attorneys and will, it is said, sue the company for $25,000 damages.

You have often asked or been asked: "Why does the thunder sour milk?" The answer is this: Milk is very sensitive to atmospheric changes. Electricity, the cause of thunder, produces, or if it does not really "produce," follows great and rapid changes in the atmospheric conditions. Lightning is the discharge which comes of electrical inequalities, producing chemical changes in the air. Thunderstorms represent the greatest activity of electrical phenomenon, and the best authorities give it as their opinion that the electricity in the atmosphere is the prime cause of milk souring during the prevalence of such storms.

Apropos of the popularity in Georgia of Gen. John B. Gordon, and of the great scar on his cheek, which is due to a saber wound, they tell this story: The late Robert Toombs was jealous of the general and once remarked: "If that scar were on the back of Gordon's neck instead of on his face, he wouldn't be so popular." Gordon heard of this, and a few days later, while addressing a political gathering, retorted as follows: "If Toombs had been where I was when I got that scar, it would be on the back of his neck instead of his face."

BEAUTIFUL OLD AGE.

How an Octogenarian Belle Retains Her Pure Complexion Tints.

Old age, the author of the Lady's Dressing Room tells us in a characteristically French sentence, is the bankruptcy of the sex; at the same time she has known beautiful octogenarians, such as the Marechale Davoust, who retained a lovely complexion at 85, and who attributed it to the fact that she had always lived temperately and fared frugally, and also to never having washed her face in anything except clear water. The chapter on feminine diet in this relation to the preservation of the bloom of youth on the cheeks ought to be highly popular with the sex. The baroness gives "advice gratis" on this head, and also some instructive recipes. What is the cause of bad complexions? she asks. No doubt it is too rich diet, the abuse of butcher's meat, sauce, liquors and old wines. Vegetables and fruit, she assures us, are talismanic in their effect on the purity of the skin. She mentions the curious fact that our forefathers of the fifteenth century believed implicitly in soups made of white chickweed to clear the complexion, and the author indorses their opinion. "Spinach and leeks bring lilies to the cheeks," to quote an old rhyme; and the baroness further believes in the efficacy of cucumbers, carrots and tomatoes. Finally, pastry should not be eaten more than once a week, meat once a day, sugar in moderation and bonbons "hardly ever." Perhaps these may appear hard sayings; but it is probably even harder to most women to find their good looks seriously imperilled through the deterioration of the natural coloring of the cheeks. Other little details to which the author most obligingly attends are the teeth, the perfuming of the mouth, the care of the nails, and so on; and if you find that a slight irritation of the throat spoils the sweetness of the voice, you are permitted either to gargle with salt and water, or do as the Arabians do, feed yourself on the pulp of cooked apricots. A red nose, it must be admitted, is a particularly undesirable defect, if only on account of its exceptional conspicuousness, and it is satisfactory to find that there are remedies for this blemish which, whether effectual or not, would seem to be harmless enough. But precautions in the use of these are necessary. In relation to one of them the sufferer is told: "Wet the nose at least three times a day with this refreshing lotion, but do not wipe it off." Certainly to wipe one's nose off would be worse than leaving it in a rubicund condition. Let it not be imagined, however, that man has it all his own way in the book, and that women are invited to attend to details of the toilet in order to please him without his being expected to make any return. "I feel a great desire," says the author with charming candor, "to tell the lords of creation that they can afford even less than the fair sex to lose the glamour with which the love of their fiancees has surrounded them, and that the inconsiderateness which men show under these circumstances is really culpable. Every one should take as much pains to preserve as to obtain love." All which means, we suppose, that man, as the uglier animal, has more need to try to look attractive than woman has—a Parthian shot of the most deadly description, with which the baroness fitly concludes the preface to her useful and entertaining little work.

THE BLACK STONE AT MECCA.

At the northeast corner of the Kaaba, near the door, and four or five feet above the ground is the famous Hadschar-el-Aswad, or Black Stone. It is an irregular oval, says Burckhardt, about seven inches in diameter, with an undulating surface, and seems to be composed of several stones of different sizes cemented together. It is worn to its smooth surface by the millions of kisses and touches it has received. The Moslems say it was originally white, but has become black by reason of men's sins. It is surrounded by a border of cement rising a little above the surface, and this again by a broad band of silver gilt. Burton said the aperture in which the stone is measures one span and three fingers long. Burckhardt describes its color as a deep reddish-brown, approaching to black. It appeared to Burton black and metallic, and seemed to him a common aerolite, with a thick shaggy coating, worn and polished. It is not improbable that the stone obtained its sacred character with the pagans on account of its meteoric origin.

Round the Kaaba is a fine pavement of granite polished like glass by the feet of the faithful, describing an irregular oval. It is surrounded by iron posts supporting cross rods, from which hang green glass globe lamps, which make a faint illumination. Indeed, the thousand lamps of the court make little impression on the gloom of night. Beyond the poles is a second pavement eight paces broad, a little elevated, and round that another, higher and broader.

The ceremony of Tawuf, of circumambulation, is performed on the inner oval pavement of polished granite. It consists in circling the Kaaba seven times, ejaculating the proper prayers at the proper points, and kissing the black stone. The first three circuits are made at a quick-step pace, called running, the four latter slowly and leisurely. Usually in the Hadj the crowd about the Kaaba is so great that it is difficult to reach the sacred stone to kiss or even touch it. Burton, by the aid of a dozen stout Meccans, literally fought his way through the enraged Bedouins, and while kissing and rubbing the stone carefully examined it for two minutes, and decided that it is a big aerolite. After that he repaired to the well Zem-zem, took a copious draught of the, to him, nauseous water, and was deluged with three skinfuls of it dashed upon him in order to wash away his sins. —From "The Holy Places of Islam," by Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine for November.

A NEEDLE OF WOOD.

I saw something novel while I was among the Zengi Indians last summer, down on the Amazon river, said M. J. Dean, of St. Augustine, Fla. It was a needle of wood—a thorn that grows in great profusion along the banks of the Amazon in that hilly country. The Indians have adopted the thread of the white man, although they use only the very coarse grades. But the needle they forego. That is too sharp and thin for them. They cannot accustom themselves to a thimble, either, so that the primitive thorn needle still holds sway.

These thorns are as sharp as a needle and very hard. They will not bend, and when sufficient pressure is brought to bear they snap in two as does a piece of steel. But the feature of these thorn needles is that they are eyeless and remain so. Eyes are not needed. The "banno" shrub, a small, sticky plant, furnishes, by squeezing a section of the stem, a fluid substance or glue, that in a few moments hardens when subjected to the conditions of dry atmosphere. The glue possesses wonderful strength for such raw material. An indenture is made with the teeth at the base of the thorn, the coarse thread is laid in this indenture so as to fill it, then a stick of "banno" is squeezed and rubbed to and fro over the jointure of the thread and thorn. In a few moments the paste is dry, and the thread will break in 20 places before it will tear loose from the thorn. The base of the thorn is flat, and the Indians find no trouble in forcing it through the toughest leather. When the thread is used up the needle is tossed away. The thorns are very plentiful, and are gathered several times a year. They are stored away and left to dry, when they become very hard. These Zengi Indians carry always a dozen of these needles for emergencies. It takes a long while to describe this process, but if you could see them do it it would seem almost as easy and as rapid as our threading a needle.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THIS IS FUNNY.

It is about time for the reappearance of the chrysanthemums young man, remarks the Buffalo Courier. Everybody is familiar with the type of youth that walks up Main street pinned on the back of the ragged Japanese blossom. The larger the chrysanthemum and the brighter its hues the better it suits him. Speaking of chrysanthemums, a high compliment was paid to Nature the other day when a sweet girl said: "See that lovely blossom! It looks for all the world as if the petal were cut out of that canning crinky yellow tissue paper."

Mrs. A.—You say brandy is a good remedy for colic, but I don't agree with you, Mrs. B.—What do you know about it? Mrs. A.—A great deal. Before I had brandy in the house my husband never had colic more than once or twice a year, but as soon as I kept a supply he had colic almost every day, and now since this cholera talk the colic has become chronic with him.—Texas Siftings.

Mr. Meanitall—I love you. Will you be my wife?

Miss Tennis—Excuse me, before I reply, but the uncertainty of the season now demands that I should ask whether you consider this a summer or a winter proposal.

"Pardon me, madam," replied the physician, "I am not a veterinary surgeon."

Sweet Girl—"Have you any parlor shades that won't break loose and fly up all of a sudden when you least expect it?" Dealer—"Yes, miss." Sweet Girl—"Well, I wish you'd send a man around and see if he can talk ma into buying some."—New York Weekly.

In Central Africa—Explorer: Are you a permanent resident of this country? Native Chief—Ob-a-job-wob-bish-wa! Explorer—Well, if that means "yes," perhaps you can direct me to one of your groves around here. I'm from the Annexed District of New York. We've opened a new street over there, and as we've used up the American varieties the common council sent me out here to find an entirely new species of tree to name the street after.

"I expect to see the time when electricity will be used for all cooking and heating purposes," remarked Von Braam. "Then I suppose bakers will sell ohm-made bread," added Dindwiddie.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"No, Mr. Timberwheel," said Miss Elder, kindly but firmly, "I cannot marry you, but I'll be a —"

"Thanks, Miss Elder," interrupted the rejected one, spitefully; "but I have two grandmothers."

"Well, Bob," said the visitor, "what are you collecting now, coins or stamps?"

"Coins," said Bob.

"Well, what coin do you want now? Maybe I can give it to you."

"Thanks," said Bob. "Any twenty-fi'cent piece 'll do."

ALUMINIUM FOR SHIPS.

Fifty years ago the introduction of iron as a building material created a revolution in the science and art of shipbuilding. It is now certain that in the very near future an even more important revolution will be created by the introduction of aluminium. At present there are in existence but five small craft constructed of this metal. Three are petroleum yachts which were built this year at Zurich. One is a Swedish lifeboat. The fifth is a yacht which is now completing for sea in this country.

Until two or three years ago the high price of aluminium entirely barred the way to its general usefulness, but the metal has since become much cheaper, and to the ship-builder it offers so many striking advantages that, even at the comparatively high price which is still charged for it, it is sure of general adoption. In strength and toughness it rivals steel; in non-liability to corrosion it is almost as good as gold, and in lightness it stands altogether alone. Nor is this all. The hull of an old iron ship, when sold to be broken up, goes for nearly nothing. The hull of an old aluminium ship would, it is estimated, if disposed of as worn-out metal, fetch nearly two-thirds of its original cost. This is a consideration which capitalists and investors are not likely to lose sight of.

To the naval constructor aluminium comes, of course, as precisely the material of which he is mostly in need. His great problem of late years has been to reduce to the lowest possible dimensions what may be called the inevitable weights of his vessels. It is computed that by using aluminium instead of steel he may without sacrifice of strength reduce the weight of a ship's hull by fully one-half. —Leeds Mercury.

MAP OF THE WORLD.

A Production in Which All the Leading Nations Are to Take Part.

At the geographical congress in Berne a year ago, Prof. Penck proposed the publication of a map of the entire world on a uniform scale of one in 1,000,000, or about 16 statute miles to the inch, the various nations to take part in the production of the map.

The proposition was favorably entertained, and a committee was appointed to take steps for its realization. The geographers of various nations, on the whole, have received the idea with favor, and there seems to be no doubt the map will be produced, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Each sheet of the map up to 60 degrees north latitude will embrace 5 degrees in each direction. The more northern sheets will embrace 10 degrees of longitude. The representation of the whole earth, including the sea, will require 936 of these sheets, while the land alone may be shown on 760 sheets.

It is proposed to give great attention to physical and political feautres. Dr. Ravenstein, the English map maker, says the rivers will be in blue and the hills in brown. Contour lines will be drawn at elevations of 100, 300, 500 and 1,200 metres, and the areas inclosed by them are to be tinted.

It is expected that sheets which deal with countries already topographically surveyed will be engraved on copper. The remaining sheets will probably be lithographed.

The Greenwich meridian will be accepted for the entire map, and all latitudes are to be marked in the metres. The official spelling of all countries using the Latin alphabet is to be retained.

Other alphabets are to be translated in accordance with a system to be agreed upon, while names in unwritten languages will be spelled phonetically.

It is estimated that the cost of an edition of 1,000 copies of this map, showing only the land surface, will be $957,190, and as the sale of the first edition at two shillings a sheet would produce only $478,595, the deficit would have to be made up by the governments concerned or by liberal private patrons.

Prof. Revenstein says he sees nothing Utopian in the scheme. Difficulties may arise as to the spelling of the names and the introduction of the metre, but the essential thing, to his mind, is the production of a map on a uniform scale.

TO CURE SEASICKNESS.

A clever trick was played a short time ago on board a steamboat plying between Calais and Dover. The sea was rough. A young woman, apparently ill with seasickness, groaned until a gentleman, who seemed to be a stranger, approached and asked if she would take a lozenge, which he had often tried on the people with marvelous results. The young lady finally accepted the offer. The cure was instantaneous, says the Boston Transcript. Hardly had she swallowed the lozenge when she was sitting up, all smiles and ordering ham sandwiches and bottled ale. Some passengers, struck with the incident, inquired what was the wonderful remedy, and the gentleman, who proclaimed himself the agent for the sale of the lozenges, disposed of a considerable number of boxes at $2 each. What was the surprise of the buyers when they saw the lady and her preserver go off arm in arm when the boat reached Dover. The pills were common jujube paste.
